28½ Billions Requested By President For Arms

9 Billions Would Be for Expanding Army Air Corps, Congress Is Told

By Robert DeVore
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday called on Congress for 28½ billion dollars to be spent on planes, guns, ships, tanks and other materials for the victory arsenal.

His new war requests, more than 21 billion dollars of which —including contract authorizations—he asked be made available in this fiscal year, would lift to the staggering total of 114 billion dollars expenditures either appropriated, authorized or requested for war since June 30, 1940.

Conspicuous among five "emergency supplemental estimates" for expenditure for military purposes by the War Department—in this fiscal year, if necessary—was a projected $9,041,373,090 expansion of the Army Air Corps.

Presumably the money, to remain available to June 30, 1943, would pay for part of the 185,000 war planes which the President has set as the goal for 1942-43.

Eight Billions Asked for Navy

War Department estimates, totaling $12,525,872,474, included $1,547,948,529 for the Ordnance Department.

To be available in the fiscal year ending next June 30, the President asked $4,596,783,500 in cash and $4,170,000,000 in contract authorizations for the Navy Department, or a total of $8,768,783,500. In addition, he also proposed that the 1943 Navy budget be increased by $7,193,881,521 "net additional cash" over the total carried in his budget message to Congress January 7. The proposed change would give the Navy a 1943 budget of $13,124,056,589.

Budget officials emphasized that the new estimates made no change in the President's 59-billion-dollar 1943 war budget. This figure represents the Budget Bureau's judgment of the Government's ability to spend for war between July 1, 1942, and June 30, 1943, it was explained. War expenditures in this fiscal year will approximate 26 billions.

Funds for Vessels Included

Mr. Roosevelt's action yesterday was in line with his budget statement that Congress would be asked to appropriate, from time to time, such amounts as may be necessary for prosecution of the war, the ultimate cost being as unpredictable as the shifting fortunes of the conflict.

"I can only say that we are determined to pay whatever price we must to preserve our way of life," the President said.

With the daily submarine toll in the Atlantic increasing alarmingly, Representative Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, House Naval Affairs Committee chairman, translated into immediate legislative action that portion of the President's estimates

Senate Passes Bill Giving President Control of Wires

Legislation empowering President Roosevelt to take wartime command of all telegraphic and telephonic communication facilities of the Nation yesterday passed the Senate and went to the White House.

The Senate completed action on the emergency measure, previously passed by the House, after Senator Taft (Republican), Ohio, voiced in the chamber the prediction that the facilities never would be returned to private control once that control is assumed by the Government.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee, assured the Senate, however, that there was no intention on the part of the Government physically to take over communications operations.

Woman Attacked; Peddler Held

Identified by a young married woman who said he criminally assaulted her, a punchboard salesman was being held for police investigation last night.

The victim, 19, removed to Gallinger Hospital after pointing out her attacker, said the 32-year-old man entered her apartment yesterday morning with punchboards to sell.

Newcomers Discover Private Baths Went Out With Hitler

(Federal Workers May Get Defense Housing Assistance, Page 15.)

By Bill Brinkley
Post Staff Writer

Officially, the blue-shuttered, white house on Post Square is the new home of the Defense Housing Registry. Unofficially it is also the Hall of Orientation for Washington Newcomers.

The new comers usually with the shadows of travel around their eyes, step up to the speckled counter, lean forward on their elbows and state:

"We want a suite with private bath in walking distance of the Munitions Building."

Right there is here the great orientation begins. In vocal tones mellowed by experience the interviewer kindly breaks the fact to such newcomers; boiled down, that private baths in Washington went out with Hitler, that "walking distances" apply only to cross-country runners.

"However, maybe we can get you a room by a bus line leading to the Munitions Building. But you'd have to share the bath."

Yesterday afternoon, second day in the new building, there was usually a solid line of persons being interviewed along the counter.

The procedure is to determine where the newcomer will work,

Biddle Urges Priority Laws Be Given Teeth

New War Measure Providing Stiff Penalties Goes to Subcommittee

Attorney General Francis Biddle asked Congress yesterday to "put some teeth" in the priority laws to prevent what he said have been "widespread and serious" violations of priority and allocation orders.

Biddle sent a statement to the Senate Judiciary Committee indorsing the "Second War Powers Bill" supplementing the President's existing broad authority to prosecute the war.

The new omnibus war measure, providing stiff penalties for violation of priority orders and giving the President clear power to take over tools as well as plants if needed for defense, was referred to a five-man subcommittee headed by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming.

Biddle said a tightened priority law was recommended by Donald Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, after investigations by the priorities division indicated serious violations.

He asked civil and criminal remedies in addition to the various administrative sanctions that can now be applied to obtain enforcement.

Tax Increase Urged to Permit D. C. Pay Rise

Schulte and Sauthoff Say Boost in Living Cost Is Justification

An increase in the District property tax rate was urged yesterday by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, and Representative Sauthoff (Progressive), of Wisconsin, as a means of financing pay rises for District government employes.

Representative Sauthoff declared at a House District subcommittee hearing on a bill to increase the pay of police and firemen of the rank of captain or lower that Washington is "the most greatly favored city in the country" in its tax rates.

Representative Schulte, sponsor of the pay increase measure, stated that due to the current high costs of living "it's high time we increased the salaries of all the lower paid employes of the District government."

At the outset of the hearing Commissioner J. Russell Young said that while he has the highest opinion of both departments, he did not believe that pay increases could be financed at the present time. He declared that it has been impossible to obtain new men for the force fast enough, and that it is possible the civilian auxiliary force will have to furnish 500 or 1000 men to serve

'If There Were Nothing Useful . . .'

Mrs. Roosevelt Will Stay In OCD, 'If They Want Me'

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt declared yesterday she would remain with the Office of Civilian Defense as assistant director "if they want me."

The First Lady declared the only reason she is there is that she is able to be useful. "If there were nothing useful I could do," she said, "I certainly would not be here."

Answering questions at her weekly press conference, Mrs. Roosevelt said she does not believe Easterners will feel the pinch of tire rationing nearly so much as persons living in the West and accustomed to traveling great distances for supplies.

Fortunately, she said, tires on her own automobile are in pretty good shape—and in addition she owns a bicycle. She revealed, however, that she is unable to ride the latter vehicle.

As for sugar shortage, the First Lady doubts the country will suffer so much, since "there are so many energy-building substitutes." By careful planning, she said, discomforts resulting from both the tire and sugar situation can be eased considerably.

One of the best pieces of planning, she pointed out, is that which prepares the individual for making any adjustments that have to be made. Housewives who try to beat the sugar supply by hoarding, for instance, are unable to do so regardless of how much they try, the First Lady said. "They just can't buy enough to do themselves any good," she declared.

Reds Drive Foes' Rear Guard Out Of Flaming City Street by Street

By the United Press

London, Jan. 19.—Russian troops are fighting their way street by street through Mozhaisk and Orel, central and southern strong points in the Moscow battle line, and Mozhaisk is burning from end to end, sending out great clouds of smoke into an icy gale, Russian dispatches said tonight.

Meantime, other Russian troops were battling Nazis on the outskirts of the great industrial city of Kharkov.

Stockholm dispatches said Russian armored units and Russian guards division troops fought their way into Mozhaisk, 57 miles west of Moscow, and that the cream of the German army was fleeing west from the burning town over frozen roads, harried incessantly by Russian cavalry and ski patrols and by Russian dive-bombers.

Nazi Ski Troops Beaten

German Gen. Reinhart's panzer forces are fighting a street-corner rear guard action, Stockholm dispatches said. German ski troops, rushed up from Smolensk, were reported hurled back by Russian ski troops and Soviet fighting planes were said to have cleared the skies of German planes.

The midnight communique broadcast by Moscow radio said several more towns were captured by the Russians in the Moscow sector, including Kondrovo "in the Smolensk district." The communique confirmed the capture of Vereya, 70 miles west of Moscow and 17 southwest of Mozhaisk. Russian forces at Vereya were a peril to the German line of retreat.

Mozhaisk Fired by Nazis

"Our forces continued to throw the Germans back west," the communique said. "The enemy suffered heavy losses."

A Stockholm dispatch to the London Daily Chronicle said the Battle of Mozhaisk began after the Russians, pushing steadily forward through low hills flanking the highway, railway and the Moskva River,

Roosevelt Sends Condolence Wire To Clark Gable

Los Angeles, Jan. 19 (A.P.).—A telegram of condolence from President Roosevelt arrived today at the nearby ranch home of Screen Actor Clark Gable, whose film actress-wife, Carole Lombard, was one of 22 persons killed in the crash of an airliner near Las Vegas, Nev.

"Mrs. Roosevelt and I are deeply distressed," read the message. "Carole was our friend, our guest in happier days.

"She brought great joy to all who knew her and to the millions who knew her only as a great artist. She gave unselfishly of her time and talent to serve her Government in peace and in war. She loved her country.

"She is and always will be a star, one we shall never forget nor cease to be grateful to. Deepest sympathy."

A year ago, when Miss Lombard and Gable were in the East, they stopped in Washington and met the President.

Ex-Sen. Blease Dies in So. Carolina

Coleman Livingston Blease, former Governor and former Senator from South Carolina, died yesterday at Columbia, S. C. The 73-year-old perennial candidate had undergone an operation.

He was Governor of his State from 1911 to 1915. After one defeat in 1920, he was elected to the United States Senate in 1924 in a surprise victory over Representative James F. Byrnes, present Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. Only last year he was elected by the General Assembly to the State Unemployment Commission and had begun a four-year term last July.

Aussies Wipe Out Japanese Threat to West Malaya Flank

By the United Press

Singapore, Jan. 19.—Maj. Gen. Henry Gordon Bennett's Australian troops were reported tonight to have loosed a counter-offensive against the Japanese on the Malaya coast 90 miles above Singapore which carried them close to the mouth of the Muar River.

Late reports from the front said the Australians, bent on reducing the Japanese bridgehead menacing the imperial left flank, had pushed back the invaders several miles and were approaching Bandar Maharani, where the Muar empties into the Strait of Malacca.

General headquarters in a midday communique had reported Japanese infiltration along the coast below the river, compelling the defense forces to withdraw. It also acknowledged a further Japanese advance at the other end of the 40-mile line across west Malaya to the Segemat area 115 miles above Singapore and 15 miles below Gemas, strategic railway junction on the Johore border.

"A Splendid Job"

Authoritative reports later said the Australians, implementing Bennett's assertion Saturday that the Muar River threat would be wiped out, had already accounted for 11 Japanese tanks in what the commander called a "splendid job."

The same communications channels brought word that one imperial detachment went into action at an unspecified point on the Muar River and cleared out the entire area.

On Saturday morning the unit reached an advance position in the Muar area, only to find itself trapped by Japanese infiltration. Taking up a circular formation, the men spent the rest of the day and the better part of the night under Japanese sniping and mortar shelling.

At dawn the welcome chatter of machine guns in the distance signalized the arrival of another imperial unit coming to relieve the encircled detachment. Together they deployed in the rubber groves

The body of Israel Mufson, 49, labor information specialist for the National Youth Administration, of 42 Independence Avenue Southwest, who disappeared in Detroit last November 16, was found in the Detroit River yesterday, according to the Associated Press.

Mufson, who had been editor of the Brewery Workers' official paper and a member of the staff of Labor's Nonpartisan League, joined the staff of the NYA last spring. When he vanished he was in Detroit on a field trip

Court-Martial Tries Colonel Who Attacked U. S. Policy

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 19.—A veteran Air Corps officer in a public speech blamed the Pearl Harbor disaster on the American public's sanctioning of a policy of sending aircraft to Axis foes, witnesses testified at his general court-martial today.

Col. H. C. Kress Muhlenberg, first high-ranking officer summoned before a court-martial since the United States declared war on the Axis, denied he disobeyed orders by discussing the foreign policy of the United States.

Under the Lend-Lease Act the United States was authorized to ship fighting planes to England, China and Russia.

In charging that Col. Muhlenberg violated the ninety-fifth and ninety-sixth articles of war, the Army quoted him as saying on December 17—ten days after the Pearl Harbor attack by the Japanese—in a speech before the Curtiss Flying Club here:

"The American people are going to be hunting for 'goats' to blame, but they are the 'goats' because they wouldn't let the Air Corps have the planes."

Kenneth Turner, president of the flying club, testified he recalled Muhlenberg saying "You can't send your airplanes all over the world and expect to have them where they're needed."

Turner said the colonel further asserted that "if the Japanese hadn't scattered their attack and had con-

Five U. S. Bombers Down Nine Jap Fighters Over Indies

'Heavy' Craft Blast Seized Airport in Celebes; Beaten Foe Relaxes Pressure on MacArthur

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Five American bombers shot down nine Japanese interceptor planes Saturday in an air battle with greatly superior enemy forces in the Dutch East Indies.

This was disclosed by the War Department last night in a communique which also revealed that American Army bombers are aiding the defense of Singapore.

United States Army bombing planes, it was said, staged a "successful attack" on a Jap airdrome in Malaya, setting three large fires among enemy planes on the ground.

The fight between five United States Army bombers and a fleet of Jap fighters occurred over an enemy flying field at Menado, which is at the extreme eastern tip of the northern peninsula of the Island of Celebes. Two of the American planes are missing and a third was damaged, the War Department said.

Four members of the crew of the damaged bomber were wounded, Army Communique No. 66 reported.

Telling of the air battle over the Dutch Island of Celebes, the communique said that the five American planes dropped several bombs on the Japanese-held air field with "undetermined results."

Then a "formation" of Japanese interceptor planes attacked the United States bombers. There was

U. S. Lawyers to Appeal To Get Case Moved From Goldsborough

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough yesterday swept aside a sworn charge that he "has a personal bias or prejudice against the Government of the United States" and insisted upon being the judge who presides at the District Court trial of the German propagandist, George Sylvester Viereck.

Government counsel made the charge in a formal "affidavit of personal bias" filed late yesterday.

Justice Goldsborough refused to disqualify himself and transfer the case to one of the ten other judges of the court, as was demanded by Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, jr., of the Department of Justice propaganda squad.

When Goldsborough insisted on continuing with the Viereck trial, Maloney and Hickey refused to take further part in the proceedings and warned that they would ask the United States Court of Appeals here to intervene.

Viereck is under indictment on charges of concealing his propaganda activities on Capitol Hill when he registered with the State Department. His trial was scheduled for February 2 until last Thursday, when Goldsborough assigned himself to conduct the trial and ordered the prosecutors to be ready to start yesterday. When they protested that the trial was of great importance and that they needed the remainder of the month for adequate preparation, Goldsborough gave them until tomorrow. On Saturday he ordered certain preliminary mot[illegible] s argued

7 Tell of Fight To Stay Out Of Propeller

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 19.—Flame-covered waters were believed today to have claimed the lives of 22 crewmen of a United States tanker sunk in a torpedo attack off the Atlantic Coast, while others of the crew of 35 brought ashore recounted a grim fight with "the strength born of the knowledge of certain death if we failed."

The tanker, the 8635-ton Allan Jackson, of the Standard Oil Co., survivors said, "seemed to be parting in the middle and there was fire everywhere" a few moments after a torpedo struck amidships as the vessel was en route to New York yesterday off the North Carolina coast.

Seven of the 13 men known to have survived the sinking told of battling desperately to keep from being sucked into the propeller of the ship which continued to churn as the vessel sank. They were brought here on an unnamed vessel after spending six hours in an open boat. The rescue ship also brought in hospital cases and four bodies.

It was a defiant seven men, in spite of their harrowing experiences, who spoke of the "lousy" attackers who "stab in the dark." One of the survivors, O. M. May, an able seamen from Panama City, Fla., said he was going to join the Navy and "get a crack" at the enemy.

The desperate struggle against suction, water and flames was told by Rolf Clausen, boatswain, who was in charge of the only lifeboat which managed to clear the blazing tanker. He was in the mess shack having a cup of coffee when the first shock was felt.

"I ran out on deck," he related, "and then there was another explosion, the ship seemed to be parting in the middle and there was fire everywhere.

"The No. 3 lifeboat in the stern was being lowered. I jumped in and we managed to get her down

U. S. Army Fliers Sent to Defend Aruba, Curacao

Balboa, Canal Zone, Jan. 19 (A.P.).—Army headquarters announced tonight that the United States, in cooperation with the Netherlands government, has sent air forces to the islands of Aruba and Curacao "to assist in protection of those vitally important oil centers."

The islands are off the coast of Venezuela. With Dutch Guiana, where the United States sent a protective force in November, they constitute the principal Netherlands possessions in the Western Hemisphere.

Tanker Malay Is Torpedoed, Shelled; Some Of Crew Missing

By Harry Nash
Associated Press Staff Writer

Newport News, Va., Jan. 19.—Striking without warning in the predawn darkness shrouding the North Carolina coast, an enemy submarine today shelled and torpedoed the 8,206-ton American tanker Malay, killing one crew member and sending four others to probable death.

[This attack came amid mounting indications that enemy subs are fighting a widespread battle with American naval forces and merchantmen all along the Eastern Seaboard.—Editor's note.]

The unarmed tanker sought unsuccessfully to elude her attacker which disappeared after a two-hour attack, and then the damaged ship proceeded up the Coast to Hampton Roads under her own power and limped to anchorage off the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. plant.

Coast Guard surfboats brought ashore at Oregon Inlet, N. C., Hay's body and the following injured men:

Hurley Named Brigadier General; Off on Mission

Patrick J. Hurley, former Secretary of War under President Hoover and a World War veteran, was nominated yesterday by President Roosevelt as a brigadier general.

It was learned that Hurley already has left the country under sealed orders from the President. The White House declined to announce Hurley's assignment, but said that he would not be a line officer.

Hurley saw action in the first World War at Aisne-Marne, Meuse-Argonne and St. Mihiel and was cited for gallantry in action.

Hurley entered the Hoover Administration as Assistant Secretary of War in 1929 and became Secretary upon the death of James W. Good. In 1933 he began practicing law in Washington.

Two Axis Ships Hit By Torpedo Planes

Britons Weep When Freed At Halfaya

By Richard D. McMillan
United Press Staff Writer

Halfaya Pass, Egyptian-Libyan Frontier, Jan. 19.—Capture of this German-Italian fort has released a little band of British war prisoners who spent almost two months in caves, suffering constantly from hunger, thirst, filth and boredom.

At the sight of husky, sun-burned South African troops swinging up "Hellfire Pass" to rescue them last Saturday, they hobbled from their holes, cheering in cracked voices and trying to sing "Auld Lang Syne." In a few minutes they were all weeping.

These prisoners told me they had been so hungry they scraped the dry dust of the desert seeking currants or grains of rice which might have been dropped by their captors.

Tiny Daily Ration

"Our daily ration was a small tin of bully beef with hardtack to share among three men." One pilot said, "We never tasted any water, and our only liquid was two-thirds of a pint daily in the form of salty soup or, sometimes, salty coffee. We were all scared to drink it because it made our thirst even more agonizing."

The British bombing and shelling, particularly from ships of the fleet, was so bad that he appealed to Maj. Bach, the German commander of the fort, to provide special markings for the prisoners' caves, he said.

"Bach, whose conduct throughout the siege was most correct toward us, provided a couple of hundred gasoline cans with which we formed the large letters 'P-O-W.' (Prisoners of war). Thereafter bombings were lighter in our area."

Wounded Suffer

The wounded suffered through lack of water and medical equipment, and there was only one British medical orderly to care for them.

As I talked to him, he held up his hands. They were black.

"That's iodine and dirt combined," he said. "We saved all our wounded but I don't know how we managed to do it, because I became too weak to climb the wadi to get medicines from the Germans. They couldn't come to us because of the intense and murderous fire of our shells and bombs. Nobody dared to move."

The medical officer, using a penknife which was his only available instrument, had amputated the arm of a German soldier wounded by a British bomb. The operation saved the German's life, and as a reward, the German commander sent cigarettes to the British.

Nazis' Morale Breaks

"The Nazis' morale began to break as they realized the end was near," some of the prisoners told me.

I talked to two white-faced German prisoners in an adjoining camp bed, asking them if they were glad to be prisoners of the British.

"Mein Gott, ja," (My God, yes) they answered simultaneously.

Never before had I seen German prisoners so completely shorn of the usual Nazi bluff and braggadoci.

British soldiers in another tent said they knew the Germans were about to surrender because they began restoring many belongings Italian soldiers had stolen from the prisoners.

"The day of the surrender they told us two hours in advance that it was coming," the British said. "But we couldn't believe it until we saw the Nazis lining up three abreast to await the incoming British troops.

Hobble Out in Tears

"When we saw the imperials, someone sang 'Auld Lang Syne.' We were all in tears as we hobbled out of our caves."

One Tommy in this group, grinning through a seven-weeks' beard, told me he hadn't washed since November 25.

British Frustrate Attempt to Supply Forces in Africa

By the United Press

Cairo, Jan. 19.—Torpedo planes of Britain's naval air arm torpedoed and set afire an enemy destroyer and a large enemy tanker in the central Mediterranean while the ships presumably were attempting to rush aid to Axis forces in North Africa, it was announced today.

The planes attacked the tanker and two escorting destroyers Saturday night despite a gale and heavy rain, a Royal Air Force communique said. Torpedo hits were scored on the tanker and one destroyer.

A terrific explosion shook the tanker and a vivid orange flash lit the sky. A few seconds later there was an explosion from the destroyer.

Both vessels were showing a glow as the attacking planes flew off.

These naval air successes in the campaign to keep reinforcements from reaching German Gen. Erwin Rommel's army near the Tripolitania border were announced after military authorities revealed that 14,000 German and Italian soldiers were seized with the capture of Bardia, Salum and Halfaya. The cost to the British was less than 100 killed and 400 wounded.

In addition, a general headquarters communique said, many Axis troops were killed in the actions which led to the fall of these positions.

When the British started their drive across Libya, they shunted around the three Axis posts. Bardia, about 90 miles from the Egypt-Libya border, fell last month, and Salum, on the Egypt-Libyan border, ten days ago. The unconditional surrender of Halfaya, 20 miles south of Salum, was announced Saturday.

The communique said the number of prisoners taken at Halfaya had not been fully checked but added that thus far 48 German officers, 1770 Germans of other ranks, 173 Italian officers and 2784 Italians of other ranks, had been accounted for. The Italian officers included two generals.

A considerable number of guns and a large quantity of war materials were taken in the fall of the three towns, the communique said.

"The success of these operations, in which South African troops played a major part, was due in large measure to the close and effective cooperation of the royal navy and our air forces, whose planes paved the way for the reduction of each locality by our infantry, supported by royal tank regiments," the communique said.

The communique also said that apart from patrolling activity by both sides, there was no change in the situation east of El Agheila, 330 miles west of the Egypt-Libya border, where German mechanized forces have been reported preparing for a stand against advancing British imperials.

Berlin Reports:

Successes In Crimea for New Generals

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
MARSHAL RITTER VON GREIM

Berlin, Jan. 19 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A.P.).—Soviet forces which landed on the south coast of the Crimea in a counter-offensive on the Black Sea peninsula have been driven from the port of Feodosiya in several days of fierce fighting, the German high command declared today.

The war bulletin said German and Rumanian troops which reoccupied the port so far had brought in 4600 Red army captives and war booty including 73 tanks and 77 guns.

Elsewhere, the initiative admittedly was held by Russians. The communique said Soviet attacks had been pressed despite heavy losses on the central and northern zones of the Russian front and that fighting still was in progress with strong Soviet forces on the offensive all along the Donets front.

The Axis forces in the battle for reoccupation of Feodosiya were commanded by Infantry Gen. von Manstein and backed up by air forces under Air Chief Marshal Ritter von Greim, the communique said.

These were new names in the galaxy of German generals and may cast some light on recurring reports from foreign sources of shakeups in the Nazi command.

In air operations, the communique again reported a merchant ship damaged by bomb hits in Arctic waters, several merchantmen damaged in a new assault on a British convoy off the North African coast and direct hits scored on a munitions dump in the Shetland Islands.

Reds Driving Nazis From Mozhaisk

pierced the German defenses from the south and east.

Meanwhile, 18 miles to the south, another Russian force broke through in two converging columns and captured Vereya, the Daily Chronicle said. The Russians thus were able to exert pressure on the flank of German defenses already weakened by four days of heavy shelling.

As the Russians approached in the night, the Germans fired Mozhaisk and retreated by the light of the flames just as fur-clad Russian shock troops swooped down upon them with "tommy" guns and hand grenades, the Daily Chronicle said.

Then, covered by advancing tanks, Russian infantry approached, marching down the railway from Golovina, where fighting had gone on for three days. Taken by surprise, most German machine gun nests guarding the main highway were captured before they could be used, the dispatch said.

Once in Mozhaisk, the Russians were said to have advanced rapidly until by dawn the Germans had been forced back far enough from the main body of Russians that Russian planes could attack them again without fear of bombing Russian soldiers.

The Soviet army organ, Red Star, was quoted as saying that the Germans rushed troops by airplane from France in a vain effort to stem the Russian advance at Mozhaisk.

Meanwhile, Russian motorized troops were reported blasting their way from building to building through Orel, southern anchor point of the Moscow line.

The midnight communique said 15 German and 6 Russian planes were destroyed January 18. Two more German planes were shot down today, it said, in the Moscow area. Russian planes also were said to have destroyed 8 German tanks and 55 vehicles yesterday and to have dispersed five battalions of German infantry.

German garrisons at Novgorod, in the Lake Ilmen sector below Leningrad; Kursk, between Orel and Kharkov, and Simferopol, in the Crimea, also were reported hard pressed.

Entering Orel behind a vanguard of tanks, the Russian troops stormed and captured one after another of the huge factories in the eastern half of the city, every one of which the Germans turned into a fortress, according to the Moscow radio. Soviet artillery shelled the rest of the city, and it was expected to be freed of Germans soon.

Berlin Radio Changes Tune

The Berlin radio, which only two days ago asserted that the Russians were so far east of Kharkov that the city was in no possible danger, now admitted that the Russians were making repeated attacks against Kharkov's defenses. It said they were all beaten back.

The Moscow radio said the Germans had banned all war correspondents from the Soviet front, giving transport difficulties as the reason. It said German soldiers were forbidden to send letters home from the eastern front because of the alarm these letters had been causing on the home front.

Reds Attacking at Leningrad

London, Jan. 19 (AP).—The Russian army of the north was smashing tonight at the forward anchor of the German siege line before Leningrad in attacks of rising power.

This new action, which was reported in advices to Soviet sources here, was launched across the ice of southern Lake Ladoga against Schlusselburg, the German-held lake fortress 25 miles east of Leningrad, by sledge and ski troops. One of a series of their running attacks was said already to have broken through between Schluesselburg itself and the main Leningrad-Moscow Railway.

Fighting was rising in intensity, it was said, and it thus appeared that a major offensive to turn the German line at Schluesselburg was being developed against German Field Marshall Ritter von Leeb, one of Hitler's experts in defensive warfare.

Sub Attacks U. S. Ship for 2 Hours Off Carolina Coast

tug which had taken them out in Hampton Roads from the Norfolk Naval Operating Base. The catwalk, however, Bruce said, "did a big business as the men moved toward the lifeboats."

The boatswain, expressed belief the submarine crew shelled the tanker because "they wanted us to abandon ship so they would not have to use a torpedo. Torpedoes cost money, you know."

Breaking suddenly into a grin, Bruce declared that "it's a hell of a sensation when you are lying in bed and hear that bang!"

Members of the crew said the tanker changed its course after the first shell which struck the bridge. The second shell carried away the port wing of the bridge and at least three others struck the tanker aft.

Torpedo Wake Seen

Some little time after the last shell was fired the sub sent a torpedo into the tanker in the vicinity of amidship.

William Arthur Greene, 30, of New London, Conn., second mate, said: "I was on the bridge when the shelling began. I did not see the submarine. I did see the wake of the torpedo shortly before it struck. There were five other ships astern. They put out their lights when the shelling started. A Swedish ship came up and stood by for three or four hours after the torpedoing."

The Swedes, Greene said, put over a small boat, whose crew asked if it could be of assistance.

Fourth Attack Off East Coast in Six Days

The attack on the Malay was the fourth such attick in Atlantic coastal waters within six days, and added to the belief that a sizable enemy U-boat fleet is lurking along American shores

Censorship kept the full picture of the warfare undisclosed.

But on the announced facts so far, there were three ships sunk in sea areas as wide apart as off Long Island and North Carolina.

Built in 1921 at Portland, Oreg., the Malay was formerly known as the S. S. Swiftwind. It is owned by the Seminole Steamship Corporation and is now under charter to the Gulf Oil Co.

Second Near New York

The other merchantmen attacked and sunk in coastal waters during the past week were also tankers.

First, the Panamanian-registered Norness was sent to the bottom off Long Island last Wednesday. Two of her crew are missing and believed dead, while the rest were rescued and landed at Newport, R. I.

Twenty-four hours after the Norness went down, the Allied tanker Coimbra was sunk 100 miles off New York. There have been no details given on the number of survivors from the Coimbra, although there were survivors.

Then the Standard Oil tanker Allan Jackson was torpedoed without warning off the North Carolina coast Sunday. Only 13 members of her crew of 35 have been rescued and the rest are believed lost in the flames which swept the torpedoed vessel.

Calling attention to the sinking of other tankers on both coasts, Ralph K. Davies, deputy petroleum coordinator, urged oil companies to increase the use of railroad tank cars for movement of petroleum products from producing fields.

What retaliation, if any, the Navy has taken was not disclosed, but there was no doubt that the patrol planes and ships of the Atlantic Fleet and coastal frontier forces were in action, trying to run down the U-boats.

American policy is to keep the enemy guessing about submarine losses. After World War I, it was disclosed that German U-boat morale was damaged by the uncertainty of the fate of craft that did not return.

Survivors Tell of Fight to Avoid Propellers

"Then we had a scare that was a real scare," he continued. "The propeller was still turning and we had to battle desperately to keep from being sucked in. Several times I thought that we would be pulled into the blades and ground to death, but everyone aboard realized the danger and we were strong with the strength born of the knowledge of certain death if we failed.

"God, I hope I never have to go through that again."

The lifeboat contained eight men all told, but one of their number, Chief Engineer Thomas B. Hutchins, was injured. After the boat cleared the threatening propeller suction, it picked up Stephen Verbonich, radio operator, who was swimming from the slick of flaming oil which in a few moments had spread in every direction.

"We had another battle on our hands avoiding the fire on the water," Clausen continued.

"Flames Everywhere"

"It seemed that the flames were everywhere and in a short time the sea was lighted for miles in every direction. We had to be very careful since the boat was covered with crude oil, which contained about 70 per cent gasoline. We knew that if we came in contact with the flames that she would catch fire and we would die."

While maneuvering to escape the burning oil slick, they saw a small white light in the distance.

"It must have been the submarine, but we couldn't see anything but the light and were not sure," Clausen said. "I kept the men at the oars for more than hour before rigging the sail.

"I could have set the sail before but I figured that since the men were wet and cold that the best they could do was work. Finally they were exhausted."

Clausen related that the party set a westward course and named lookouts for passing vessels.

"About four hours after the torpedoing we sighted a vessel," he said. "At first we didn't signal her for fear that she might be the submarine then we decided to make our position known and fired the Very (flare) pistol."

Apparently the rescuing vessel was not overly anxious to make contact with the lifeboat and desired to be convinced of her identity. Clausen then used a flashlight to send a messagein Morse and the rescue vessel stood by and picked them up:

"We brought the lifeboat alongside and crawled up on rescue nets."

The vessel later picked up Capt. F. E. Eritchmer, master of the Jackson, who was floating and swimming and trying to support himself on a round board. He had been in the water six hours and had suffered an arm injury.

Companion's Body Set Free

Still later, the vessel picked up Melvin A. Rand and Boris A. Voronsoff, the second and third mates, who were found supporting themselves on a plank about 25 feet long. They told of the death of the fourth mate, whom they had found swimming just outside of the oil slick. They lashed him on a plank, but after a couple of hours they noticed he appeared to be dead. Attempts to revive their companion failed and they cut the body free.

Others rescued from the lifeboat, in addition to Clausen, May and Hutchins, were Ross F. Terrell, able seaman; Teague F. Burke, storekeeper; Araciello Lopez, messman; Elmo E. Burden, oiler, and Jeremih A. Donovan.

The injured, in addition to Capt. Eritchmer and Hutchins, were Melvin A. Rand, second mate; Boris A. Varneoff, third mate; Stephen Verbonich, radio operator, and Randolph H. Larson, able seaman.

The dead brought ashore were identified as W. A. Hoerle, third engineer; H. Brown, seaman; Dimingo Pinerio, fireman, and Carl Z. Webb, oiler.

The Navy did not have the home addresses of any of the survivors.

Brauchitsch Has Operation

By the United Press

London, Jan. 19.—Field Marshal Walther von Brauchitsch, commander in chief of the German army until Adolf Hitler heeded his "intuition" and took over the job, has undergone an operation which will keep him out of action indefinitely, the Berlin radio announced today.

The announcement was regarded in some quarters as possibly oblique substantiation of the welter of rumors and reports about dissension and a purge in the Nazi military command.

The effect was heightened by its proximity to Berlin's disclosure Saturday that another field marshal, Walter von Reichenau, had died of apoplexy while on his way to Germany from the Soviet Ukraine.

Reports sprung up immediately that he had been a victim of Hitler's displeasure over his reportedly heavy losses in men and materiel on the front.

Malta Fortress Bombed Again

Valletta, Malta, Jan. 19 (AP).—This British Mediterranean island fortress tonight was under its fifth alarm since dawn as a large force of German bombers with fighter escort dropped explosives which caused a number of casualties and some property damage.

Captive Marines Put at Hard Labor

Chungking, Jan. 19 (AP).—United States marines taken prisoner by the Japanese in North China are being forced to do hard labor, according to reports reaching here today, quoting persons who escaped from Peiping into the guerrilla-controlled western hills outside the city.

The reports specifically mentioned 50 marines captured at Chinwangtao, their summer camp northeast of Tientsin, where they were waiting for the liner President Harrison to take them to Manila when hostilities started. Nothing was said about the rest of the more than 200 marines caught in North China.

British Sub Sinks U-Boat, Transport

By Larry Allen
Associated Press Staff Writer

Alexandria, Jan. 19.—The triumphant British submarine Talisman returned from the wars today with a story of sinking an enemy U-boat, a 15,000-ton Axis troop transport and damaging an Italian destroyer while playing a lone hand in the Mediterranean.

The saga of the Talisman was told by Capt. Sydney Moffatt Raw, director of Britain's undersea operations in the eastern Mediterranean.

He said the submarine was surfaced and patrolling the Mediterranean at night when it suddenly sighted a U-boat 700 yards off. The U-boat saw the Talisman at almost the same moment.

Both submarines immediately started maneuvering to get the first torpedo across. Two "tin fish" swished by the Talisman, and the British boat replied with two rounds from her guns. The second shots hit the enemy.

"Then an amazing thing happened," Raw said. "The U-boat now was within 15 feet of the Talisman with her conning tower open. She passed by the Talisman with her interior lights casting a glow over the sea and then plunged downward.

"Apparently one of the Talisman's shells had blasted the conning tower, killing all inside it, so that the enemy's crew hardly knew what happened. All that occurred within eight minutes."

Later the Talisman was cruising in a rough sea and sighted what she thought was another enemy submarine.

She fired three torpedoes which passed under what turned out to be an Italian destroyer. Then the Talisman opened fire with her deck guns and scored four hits. The decks of the enemy craft were sprayed with machine-gun fire.

During another night's cruising, Raw said the Talisman sighted the 15,000-ton enemy troop transport. The submarine fired five torpedoes.

"The Talisman scored four hits," Raw related. "The enemy ship went down within ten minutes."

The President's Day

By International News Service

CINCH: Comparatively speaking, the President yesterday morning faced a cinch on the schedule side, decided after a quick powwow with the secretariat to make good use of the breather and catch up on his military dispatch reading and analysis, call a night conference of the gold hats to discuss a few of the many problems in the Pacific and off our Atlantic coastline.

ANTS: First caller was "Wild Bill" Donovan, current coordinator of information. Wild Bill brought up a subject close to his heart. COL. is all very well, but the big, bluff hero of World War I wants to get back into active duty as a line officer instead of serving as an armchair warrior.

MORE CIVILIAN DEFENSE: OCD Executive James M. Landis and National American Legion Commander Lynn Stambaugh paired up for a conference with the Commander in Chief, got his approval on an idea to work out a more active and useful place for the Legion's members in the civilian defense framework.

WPA: Howard Hunter, WPA administrator, with a plan to cushion the shock due the four million workers temporarily dislocated by the industrial conversion program, got the Presidential deskside chair next, took some 20 minutes.

NOMINATIONS: Before knocking off for lunch, the President signed, sealed and sent up to the Senate nominations for William S. Knudsen, OPM's "production genius," to be promoted to a lieutenant general in charge of War Department production; former Secretary of War Pat Hurley, to be put back in the Army as a brigadier general of Infantry—not to serve as a line officer but as a factotum—; William A. Ekwall, former Republican Congressman, and nominator of Senator McNary for Vice Presidency on the Willkie ticket, to get a nice seat on the middle aisle as judge of the United States Customs Court.

RIO SIDE SHOW: During lunch, the President looked over the latest news from the Rio conference front, called Chief of Staff Gen. George C. Marshall, asked him to join Secretary Hull and himself in conference at 2.

SOLITUDE: As Mrs. Roosevelt was holding forth at a large and feminine tea at the White House, the President stayed in his office later than usual, went over finally when the usher gave the all clear signal around 6:30. Before and after a latish dinner, Mr. Roosevelt held court with military men of the United Nations, worked far into the small hours on staff papers, strategy changes and things-in-the-cards.

Japanese Occupy Port in South Burma

Emperor's Choice Governs Hongkong

LIEUT. GEN RENSUKE ISOGAI,
former chief of staff of the Kwantung army, has been named governor general of Hongkong.

British Troops Fall Back From City, 225 Miles From Rangoon

By International News Service

Rangoon, Jan. 19.—Japanese troops driving across a 50-mile-wide isthmus have occupied the port of Tavoy in southern Burma, British headquarters in Rangoon acknowledged tonight.

Enemy seizure of Tavoy, culminating four days of fighting with outnumbered British imperials along the road from Myitta on the Thailand border, cut off more than 300 miles of Burma's narrow southern neck that reaches down into the Malayan Peninsula.

It gave the Japanese a base from which they were expected to attack sea routes of the United Nations in the Gulf of Martaban that washes the harbor of Rangoon, capital of Burma and coastal terminus of the "lifeline" supply road to China.

225 Miles From Rangoon

Situated just below the southeastern entrance of this gulf, Tavoy is approximately 225 miles southeast of Rangoon which in turn commands the overland routes to northeast India as well as South China.

That Tavoy already is being utilized by the Japanese was indicated in an earlier communique saying that British planes had reported sighting enemy fighters, "presumably based at Tavoy," over South Burma.

Capture of Tavoy gave Japan its first major conquest on Burmese territory. Early in the six-week-old war the Japanese had seized Victoria at the southernmost tip of the Burmese panhandle on the slender Kra Isthmus. This, however, did not cut off any considerable area of Burmese soil nor did it give the Japanese any convenient base for air attacks.

Northeast News Scarce

Tavoy is the chief town in Burma's Tenasserim Province which adjoins the southern neck of Japanese-occupied Thailand on the east.

No further news was received in Rangoon, meanwhile, regarding the situation in the northeast Burmese frontier region where border skirmishes with Japanese troops from Thailand had broken out last week.

(A Berlin broadcast picked up in London reported fighting between British and Japanese troops Monday around the border town of Niki, "northeast of Rangoon.")

Cunningham Commanded Wake Air Base

The Navy said last night that Commander Winfield Scott Cunningham, of Annapolis, was in command of all naval operations on Wake Island during the two-week battle for the outpost.

A Japanese broadcast earlier had reported that Commander Cunningham was among 1235 prisoners evacuated from Wake who have arrived in Japan for internment. The broadcast listed him as the commander of Wake.

The official Japanese news agency Domei, source of the broadcast, also listed Maj. Paul Putnam, commander of the Wake air force; a Lieut. Comdr. E. B. Greey, of the Civil Engineer Corps, and Nathan Teters, chief of the civilian workers on the island, as among the 30 officers, 423 enlisted men and 782 civilians said to be captured.

There was no mention of Maj. James P. S. Devereux, commander of the Marine defense force on Wake and a Washingtonian. A Navy spokesman, however, said that there was no reason to conclude from this omission that Maj. Devereux lost his life in the epic stand of Wake's defenders.

[Domei yesterday distributed interviews with two more of the American prisoners of war from Wake Island, according to the Associated Press.

[Maj. Campbell Keene, Marine aviation officer, was quoted as saying the Japanese attack on the island last month came as "a shock to the United States" and that the garrison was caught completely unawares.

[Bernie Bergman, a plumber engaged on the Wake defense projects, was quoted as saying the war was "a darned surprise" to him, for he had gone to the island "only with the thought of making a little money."]

Commander Cunningham, Wake air base commander, is a native of Wisconsin. He entered the Naval Academy in 1916, and earned his wings as a naval aviator in 1925. He commanded Fighting Squadron Five on the carrier Yorktown in 1937-38 and took command at Wake late in November, 1941.

Japs Copy Nazi Radio Technique

San Francisco, Jan. 19 (U.P.).—Tokyo radio broadcast by transcription today the voices of two men identified by the Japanese as American war prisoners, including Commander Winfield Scott Cunningham of the Wake Island garrison.

The broadcast was an obvious copy of the German propaganda technique, whereby civilians in enemy nations are urged to listen to Axis broadcasts for news of captives.

"Radio Tokyo," it began, "presents Commander Winfield Scott Cunningham, who hails from Annapolis, Md., and Mr. Hudley C. Sutherland, who hails from Portland, Oreg. . . .

"This is Commander Winfield Scott Cunningham, United States Navy, age 43 years. At Wake Island I was in command of all the Navy and Marine forces. My home address is Annapolis, Md.

"Since capture at Wake, the prisoners, including myself, have been very fairly treated and are all in good health and are looking forward to getting back to their homes.

"To my wife at Annapolis, Md., I wish to send my best greetings and I hope for her welfare. Also I wish to tell her I am in perfect health and expect to stay that way for a long time."

Churchill Expected to Report Soon to Commons on Malaya

By the Associated Press

London, Jan 19.—Prime Minister Churchill was expected tonight to make a brief statement to Parliament soon on the critical Mayalan situation. It is likely, however, he will delay for several days his full war report embracing conversations held in Washington with President Roosevelt.

Edgar Granville, liberal national member of Parliament, served notice he would ask for an immediate debate on British setbacks above Singapore. It was believed most members were willing to give Churchill more time to confer with his ministers, defense chiefs, and dominions representatives, before making a comprehensive reply to criticism voiced during his absence.

Granville and others clearly were dissatisfied with Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden's Malayan statement January 8 in which Eden said the government accepted full responsibility for British reverses—"if we were wrong, it was a deliberate decision, and not one based on neglect."

Maj. Clement B. Attlee, lord privy seal, promised Commons an opportunity for a thorough exploration of Far Eastern and other troublesome issues, and political observers expected Churchill to announce plans for a two-day debate.

This probably will be preceded, they said, by the longest statement yet made by Churchill to a nation awaiting a detailed description of Allied strategy conceived in Washington, and in corollary conferences in Batavia, Moscow and Chungking.

Granville today said he would "ask for assurances to the people of this country, Australia, and in the Empire, that everything possible is being done by the government to defend and secure" Malaya and Singapore.

Axis Agents Frantic As Rio Vote Nears

By Turner Catledge

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 19.—Despite frantic last-minute activities by Axis diplomats, the conference of American Foreign Ministers tonight appeared certain to vote a complete break with Germany, Japan and Italy, with 19 if not all 21 American nations represented agreeing to joint action.

Final official action is expected to be taken by Wednesday or Thursday, in the face of a powerful drive by the Axis to nullify the all-important conference.

Representatives of 19 of the participating nations were ready tonight to place their signatures to an agreement to serve all relations. Argentina and Chile were the only holdouts, with Chile veering toward United action and Argentina pleading for more time to consider her course.

Ministers of other nations, determined to take decisive action, have given the Argentinians and Chileans until Wednesday to make up their minds either to come into or stay out of the all-American combination.

To Demand Closing of Borders

Some of the more determined nations will insist, furthermore, that borders be closed between adherents to the projected American alliance and any nations remaining outside its scope.

The resolution calling for a break in relations is to be considered tomorrow by the subcommittee of the committee on protection of the Western Hemisphere. The subcommittee expects to present a report to the full committee, which is likely to adopt it forthwith.

An official proclamation will be made at an open plenary session which may be convened especially for that purpose. Even if Argentina and Chile remain out—which is not at all certain—the Rio "round robin" could be classified as the greatest diplomatic victory for the Allies since the beginning of the war.

Representatives of Germany, Italy and Japan were reported to be bringing direct pressure on the governments of Brazil, Argentina and Chile, suggesting that a joint break in relations with the Axis would be considered an unfriendly act bordering on war.

Effective Pressure Evident

The effect of this pressure on Argentina and Chile, both of which have been cool to the idea of a complete break in relations with the Axis powers, is yet to be determined. Argentina's continued reluctance to join in an immediate break certainly indicates that effective pressure is being brought to bear from some source.

But the effect of Axis pressure on Brazil has been just the opposite of what its sponsors expected. The first sign of Brazil's reaction was a statement by President Getulio Vargas that Brazil no longer considers herself a neutral and is on the side of the United States for whatever may be required of her.

[In Washington, Secretary of State Hull issued a statement saying:

["The words of President Vargas before the Brazilian Press Association are a further indication of his comprehensive and clear-sighted understanding of the meaning of hemisphere solidarity. In a few words the president has simply stated the fundamental truth that the independence and security and welfare of all of us is today contingent upon the closest collaboration now that war, through no act of our own, has come to the Western Hemisphere. The president's words have given us all great encouragement"—Editor's Note.]

Axis Envoys Call

It is known that the German and Italian Ambassadors called at the office of Brazilian's foreign minister, Oswaldo Aranha, on Saturday. They said they were speaking personally and not necessarily laying down an official ultimatum.

As individuals, however, they expressed the "personal" opinion that the contemplated break of diplomatic and commercial relations would be considered in Berlin and Rome as an extremely unfriendly act.

They did not say in so many words that a break would mean immediate war, but no doubt was left in the minds of the officials with whom they conferred that the Axis contemplated retaliation.

Chilean representatives attending the conference here said that they had received word from their capital saying that Japan had indicated she would consider a break in diplomatic relations between her and any Latin-American countries as a direct act of war. Brazilian officials were reported to have displayed great annoyance at the Axis diplomats.

At the first opporunity thereafter—the luncheon of Brazilian editors—President Vargas made his strongest statement yet, favoring a close tieup with the United States.

The controlled press of Rio today carried stories of Vargas' statement, which at first was "off the record" and not for publication.

President Vargas was in direct touch with Acting President Ramon S. Castillo of Argentina, and advised him strongly of the necessity for all the Americas to sever connections with the Axis and for sending the German, Italian and Japanese diplomatic and consular officials home as quickly as possible.

In doing this, Vargas went over the head of Argentina's foreign minister, Enrique Ruiz-Guinazu, who shows increasing signs of becoming the villain of this play.

It was revealed today that Ruiz-Guinazu had laid his country's compromise proposal before Sumner Welles, United States Undersecretary of State, based on joint agreement to sever relations with the Axis, leaving to each country to decide the time and method of making the break.

The other nations represented at the conference, especially those which have already declared war, and the C. V. M. group (Colombia, Venezuela and Mexico), which introduced the resolution calling for a joint break, so far have refused to consider any sort of compromise.

Japs Admit U.S. Lines Hold In Philippines

Tokyo, Jan. 19 (Official broadcast recorded by Associated Press).—Stubborn American resistance, jungle paths blocked by strong barricades, and flanking fire from dangerously hidden artillery has held the Japanese advance toward the Bataan Peninsula to a snail's pace of a few yards an hour, a Domei dispatch said today.

Nevertheless, the decisive phase of the Philippine struggle is near, the report declared.

Domei said Gen. Douglas MacArthur's forces had established three main defense lines across the 20-mile wide peninsula, the first running from Abucay on Manila Bay to Mount Natib, just south of Olongapo naval station, and the last stretching across Mount Marivales, overlooking Corregidor Island fortress. The third was said to be an intermediate line.

(A London reception of a Tokyo broadcast of an imperial headquarters announcement said Japanese navy planes scored direct hits on "four enemy ships totaling 5500 tons" off the Philippine island of Cebu yesterday.

(There was no explanation of the action. Some United States communications companies recently announced restoration of communications with Cebu, along with nearly all the rest of the larger islands between Luzon and Mindanao and with Mindanao except at Davao.)

Japanese planes have bombed Mandalay, in central Burma, for the first time, Saigon dispatches said. Mandalay is a strategic point on the Burma line of supply to China.

Emperor Hirohito appointed Lieut. Gen. Rensuke Isogai, former chief of staff of the Kwantung army, governor general of Hongkong.

MacArthur's forces have drawn up across the Batan Peninsula. 1—First line from Abucay on Manila Bay to Mount Natib, south of Olongapo. 2—Second line based on fortified positions a few miles south. 3—Third line across the peninsula in the Mariveles Mountains on the southernmost tip of Batan

Japs Waste Bombs in Raids On East Indies

By the Associated Press

Batavia, Jan. 19.—Japanese bombs rained down on two widely separated points in the Treasure Islands of the Netherlands East Indies with little apparent effectiveness, the Dutch high command announced today.

A lightship near the Borneo oil port of Balik Papan was damaged slightly by an attack from 15 Rising Sun warplanes. Sabang, a tiny island off northern Sumatra some 1600 miles to the west, was raided by three planes which inflicted no injuries.

Land fighting "presumably is still going on" for Minahassa in northern Celebes, the Netherlands news agency Aneta said. The Japanese established a bridgehead there some ten days ago and were opposed by a stubborn Dutch garrison.

Elsewhere along the 3200-mile expanse of equatorial islands, the situation remained quiet.

The high command said nine persons were killed and 41 injured in a Japanese bombing sortie against an airdrome yesterday in central Sumatra, the large island just southwest of the violently erupting Malay battleground.

A refugee from Menado, capital of Celebes, said the Dutch had made careful plans to carry out their "scorched earth" policy long before the first Japanese troops landed.

and shattered the Japanese grip on the sector.

Singapore, Jan. 19 (AP).—Correspondents among the troops at the front reported today the Australians, British and Indians were far from disheartened by the situation in Malaya.

These accounts described singing Australians riding in a steady stream to the front in trucks chalked with such slogans as "Tokyo Express."

Full of confidence and eager to take a crack at the Japanese with bayonets or rifles, the Australians were frequently frustrated, however, by a foe which seemed to melt from view into the jungles and groves, even when once sighted.

Observers said the Japanese were well directed by maps and guides among the plantations along the coast, where many Japanese formerly were employed.

Even so, the Australians reported wiping out many a Japanese party attempting new penetrations. The Australians were acting on the aggressive theory that no-man's land always belongs to the Australian and that to hit the Japanese first is half the battle. They were well-equipped for such tactics by their jungle training.

R. A. F. Does Its Share

Blasting at little fleets of barges and boats continually attempting to slip along the coast and into shallow inlets, and swooping upon Japanese truck columns wherever they were found, the R. A. F. was contributing its growing share to this heads-up fight.

War planes bombed and machine-gunned barges and boats off the coast, and heavily attacked transports on the roads in the Muar sector, today's communique said.

Japanese fighters sent to the defense, encountered a swarm of British fighters and a big dogfight ensued. The communique said the British lost three planes, but accounted for one Japanese plane, probably downed another and damaged a third.

The Japanese air attack on Singapore's dock yards Sunday in which fires were set that burned for hours, was officially disclosed to have taken a toll of 56 killed and 135 wounded, most of them civilians.

The Enemy's Claims

London, Jan. 19 (AP).—Domei News Agency broadcast a report today from Tokyo that Japanese troops fighting their way down the west coast of Malaya were less than 25 miles from Singapore.

The broadcast declared that the Japanese had captured Pontian Besar, 25 miles west of Johore Bahru.

Another Domei dispatch said that 20,000 British troops had been "completely trapped by Japanese forces which have swept to the rear of the British position around Johore Bohru, cutting off rail and road communications leading to Singapore."

D. N. B. German official news agency, quoting Japanese sources, was heard in a broadcast as declaring that "the battle for the final possession of Malaya and the conquest of Singapore has begun." It said the decisive clash would come in the region of Johore Bahru.

Former Rep. Ekwall Named Customs Judge

President Roosevelt yesterday nominated William Ekwall to be a judge of the United States Customs Court in New York.

Ekwall is a former member of Congress from Oregon. The White House said he was recommended by Senate Minority Leader McNary. Ekwall nominated McNary for the Republican Vice Presidential candidacy at the Philadelphia convention in 1940.

U. S. Planes Join Malaya Defense

no mention of the size of the enemy fighter fleet, but from the heavy toll taken by the bombers' defense guns it must have been large.

Observers noted here that the War Department report described the American craft merely as "bombers." Prior communiques have told of the activities of United States Army "heavy bombers." This led to speculation that the planes may have been two-engine medium craft, rather than four-engine "heavy" bombers.

The Army air attack in Malaya occurred Thursday, the War Department said, but the report of it was delayed in transmission. It struck at the Japanese-held Sungei Patani airdrome about 250 miles north of Singapore.

All of the American bombers returned to their base undamaged after the successful raid, the War Department said.

There was no mention of the fighting in the Philippines in the night communique. Earlier, the War Department had reported a lull in the fighting on Bataan Peninsula.

Ground operations during the preceding 24 hours, it was said, were confined to skirmishes with enemy patrols. Japanese air activity consisted solely of numerous reconnaissance flights.

The morning communique also included a report from Gen. Douglas MacArthur that the Japs have seized harvested crops, food stores, animals and automotive equipment of the Filipinos in occupied areas. Native farmers have had their homes taken and have been formed into labor battalions, he reported.

Texts of the communiques follow:

Army Communique No. 65

1. Philippine theater. Ground operations during the past 24 hours were of a desultory nature. Enemy patrols were active and some incidental skirmishes took place with indecisive results.

Enemy air activities were confined to frequent reconnaissance flights.

Gen. MacArthur has been advised that Filipinos in the occupied areas have been summarily dispossessed of their means of transportation and other equipment. Native farmers have been evicted from their homes and formed into labor groups. Harvested crops and food stores have been seized by the invaders.

2. There is nothing to report from other areas.

Army Communique No. 66

1. Malaya.—A delayed report advises of a successful attack by American Army bombers on the Japanese-held Sungei Patani airdrome in Malaya on January 15. Three large fires were started among enemy aircraft on the ground and in the hangar area. All of our planes returned to their base undamaged.

2. Nethelands Indies.—On January 17 five American Army bombers attacked an enemy flying field at Menado in Northeast Celebes. After several bombs had been dropped on the field with undetermined results, our planes encountered a formation of Japanese interceptor planes. In the ensuing fight, nine enemy planes were shot down. Two of our bombers missing and a third was damaged, with four members of the crew wounded.

3. There is nothing to report from other areas.

then to give her listings on two or three rooms that would be most convenient. To make sure the landlord is home the applicant telephones from the registry before going out to see him.

Information about the rooms is contained on yellowish cards which the interviewer brings out on metal trays. This information is gained in part from the landlord who telephones it in, in part from the 250 volunteer inspectors of rooms.

These inspectors take personal looks at the room and note such important information as to the existence of a fire escape, number to a bath, whether the home is restricted to one sex.

Some of the questions bring strange replies. Roy Miller, manager of the registry, said one lady who was asked the question, "How many share the bath?" retorted that conditions were bad but really they hadn't come to that.

"We still take our baths separately," she said.

Another landlady said her tenants had had no trouble with the bath since she had purchased an electric washing machine. The tenants didn't take baths in the washing machine. But this machine did take the load of stockings-and-underthings washing off the poor bathtub.

Workers at the Defense Registry were happy with their new home yesterday. Moving from the old one at 458 Indiana Avenue Northwest was accomplished between Saturday night and Sunday morning. Everything was brought along "except our pet mouse." The office is equipped with 14 telephone lines, is open from 8:30 a. m. to 8:30 p. m. weekdays, 9 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. Sunday.

The new office is expected to produce an additional change: to halt newcomers sending their baggage to the "Defense Housing Registry" under the impression it's a place to live. The new office is one-story only.

Need More Rooms

Although 2500 bedrooms are now registered, the Defense Housing Registry needs thousands more rooms for Government workers daily arriving and expected. Householders are urged to register rooms by telephoning Republic 1986.

which called for expansion of the Navy's facilities for guarding merchant shipping.

Under the heading "emergency construction," the President included in estimates sent to House Speaker Rayburn, a request for authority to build 1799 additional vessels at a total cost not to exceed $3,900,000,000.

The Vinson bill would authorize construction of the ships, chiefly mine sweepers, patrol vessels and other additions to the coastal protective force. In addition, the measure also would authorize the Secretary of the Navy to provide not more than 750 million dollars in essential equipment, facilities and land at private or public establishments for the construction of ships and the production of ordnance.

Among items of expenditure which the President requested for this fiscal year was $6,333,000 for development of aviation flight test facilities at Cedar Point, in St. Marys County, Md.

Under a wartime policy of withholding all information that might possibly be of assistance to the enemy, the President's letters made public only the most essential details of proposed expenditures. In two of his letters he asked Congress to make seven million dollars available to the Public Roads Administration for expenditure on the Inter-American Highway, and called for expansion, both in this fiscal year and in 1943, of counterespionage activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

For salaries and expenses of the FBI in this fiscal year, $2,150,000 was asked. The President requested that the FBI's 1943 budget for this purpose be increased from $18,083,405 to $21,883,405.

In his estimates for the War Department, the President asked for continuation, up to 4 billion dollars, of authority to divert a portion of American war production to the Allies.

Summaries of estimates, by departments and in major categories, follow:

Navy Department, 1942:

For construction of 150,000 tons of combatant ships and acquisition of 800,000 tons of auxiliary vessels, all previously authorized, including equipment and funds for replacement of combatant vessels—$1,402,500,000.

For ordnance and ordnance stores—$1,161,274,000.

For construction of public utilities, bureau of yards and docks—$306,558,000.

Temporary and emergency construction—300 million dollars.

Bureau of aeronautics—$232,300,000.

Navy Department, 1943

Increase of estimates for purchase of ordnance and stores to bring total to $2,954,165,413—$2,442,530,000.

Bureau of Aeronautics—increase of about two billions.

Replacement of naval vessels, construction and machinery to bring total to $4,015,487,190—$1,665,000,000 increase.

Emergency construction—$1,588,600,000 increase.

Bureau of Supplies and Accounts to bring total to $1,003,566,588—$232,750,000 increase.

Armament — 235-million-dollar increase.

Funds for the Army

War Department, to be supplemental to and merged with appropriations under the same heads in the Military Appropriation Act, 1942, and subject to some limitations:

Office of Secretary of War, to expedite production of equipment and supplies for national defense—$933,000,000.

Army Signal Service—$680,242,180.

Army Air Corps—$9,041,373,090.

Ordnance Department, for service and supplies—$1,547,948,529.

Chemical Warfare Service—$323,308,675.

centrated on one objective they might have been able to take over the Hawaiian Islands."

Robert Olds, aviation editor of the Columbus Citizen, testified that Col. Muhlenberg said "The Navy is a 'gone gosling' which has its place, but it is a bad, bad second to air power." He asserted he believed the colonel did not mention specifically the United States Navy.

Both Turner and Olds quoted Muhlenberg, in substance, as saying that the American people, not the officers in charge, were responsible for the Pearl Harbor crisis because of the policy of sending American-produced planes to other powers.

Under Article 95, prescribing dismissal from the service for "conduct unbecoming an officer and gentleman," Col. Muhlenberg is accused of "wrongfully discussing the foreign and domestic policies of the United States with respect to the distribution of combat aircraft and the defense of the United States and its insular possessions."

Article 96 governs "all conduct of a nature to bring discredit upon the military service" and violations are punishable at the discretion of the court-martial.

Col. Muhlenberg is 55 years old and was on terminal leave pending his retirement next month as Fifth Corps Area air officer. A veteran of 38 years in the Army, he commanded Hickam Field, Honolulu, in 1937 and 1938, previously being stationed in the Philippines, Seattle, Baltimore and Washington, D. C.

The court-martial is composed of ten colonels.

Goldsborough Denies 'Bias,' Insists He Will Try Viereck

When the time came for this argument, Prosecutor Maloney handed up to the bench an affidavit which asserted that Goldsborough was prejudiced against the Government and could not give a fair and impartial trial. The affidavit said Maloney was "acting under the authority and direction" of Attorney General Biddle.

The affidavit said that on last November 10, Daniel F. Cohalen, jr., one of Viereck's counsel, "without showing any legal basis therefor," made "strenuous representations" that he "preferred that this case should be tried before Goldsborough."

Nevertheless, the affidavit said, the case was set before Justice F. Dickinson Letts, but was postponed because of the trial of George Hill, a secretary to Representative Hamilton Fish. Hill was convicted of perjury last week. Accordingly, both prosecutors and defense agreed to begin the Viereck case February 2.

The affidavit said that last Thursday Goldsborough took over the case and moved up the trial date. When told that such haste would compromise the public interest, the affidavit stated that he replied:

"I don't give a ——— about the Government's position. This case goes to trial not later than Wednesday, January 21, 1942, and I am going to try it. You might as well get it through your head once and for all that no other judge in this court can try this case except me, and the trial will start on Wednesday, whether the Government is ready or not. I direct the Government to be ready to start this trial on Wednesday at 10 o'clock."

Maloney's affidavit related that Goldsborough's language "was most abusive throughout the entire interview." Goldsborough, said the affidavit, declared that he "didn't give a —— what the public interest was in the case."

When the prosecutors renewed their objections yesterday morning, the affidavit said, and reminded Goldsborough that Viereck is an agent of a power with which this country is at war, the affidavit said, Goldsborough repeated his previous remarks. The affidavit said Goldsborough terminated the interview by saying, "I don't care whether the Government's case is prejudiced or not. Get this into your head, this case will be tried Wednesday."

The prosecutors filed the affidavit according to Section 25, Title 28, of the Code of Laws of the United States, which provides:

"Whenever a party to any action, civil or criminal, shall make and file an affidavit that the judge before whom the action or proceeding is to be tried or heard has a personal bias or prejudice either against him or in favor of any opposite party to the suit, such judge shall proceed no further therein, but another judge shall be designated . . ."

Goldsborough hastily perused the eight-page document and within three or four minutes after it had been given to him announced:

"The affidavit is not in accord with the facts known to the court, and the court rules that the affidavit is insufficient."

Maloney pointed out that the Supreme Court has declared that filing of such a statement prevents the judge against whom it is directed from going on with the case involved, quoting Justice McKenna, who said:

"Of what concern is it to a judge to preside in a particular case, and of what concern to other parties to have him so preside?"

Arguments by Viereck's Counsel

The prosecutors then said they would withdraw from the hearings and would take the dispute to the Court of Appeals. Goldsborough replied that he would not permit them to withdraw.

While Hickey and Maloney sat resolutely silent, Emil Morosini, jr., of Viereck's counsel, then urged the court to grant a bill of particulars, stating exactly who were the people with whose help Viereck is alleged to have carried on his propaganda activities. Goldsborough overruled him.

Morosini then urged the suppression as evidence, and the return, of certain canceled checks and other items seized when Viereck was arrested. Morosini contended that the search was unlawful. Again Goldsborough refused.

Morosini asked that the trial be put off until after the war, or until "public hysteria" subsided. Goldsborough refused. He also refused to call a new jury panel for the Viereck trial, but promised that Morosini would have wide latitude in examining the prospective jurors.

The prosecutors refused to take part in any of these arguments. They claim Goldsborough lost jurisdiction of the case when they filed their affidavit and that his rulings yesterday were nullities.

Following the hearing before Goldsborough, the prosecutors conferred with Clerk Joseph W. Stewart, of the Court of Appeals. They plan to petition the higher court today for a writ of prohibition, forbidding Goldsborough to have anything more to do with the Viereck trial.

Meanwhile, the special grand jury on Axis agents, which indicted Viereck, heard testimony from Prescott Dennett, his Washington aide, yesterday morning, adjourning until Thursday.

Justice Goldsborough was appointed to the Federal bench by President Roosevelt in 1939. He went to the bench from the House, where he was serving his tenth term in a Maryland seat at the time of the judicial appointment.

The 64-year-old jurist, before his appointment, practiced law in Denton, Md., an Eastern Shore town.

Biddle Urges Teeth For Priority Laws

order as was done during the World War on several occasions," he said. "But administrative sanctions, although highly important, do not provide an adequate remedy in all cases.

"For example, at a time when airplane production is vitally needed, it would not facilitate war production to curtail the supply of aluminum to an airplane company and thus close the plant."

The bill proposes a $10,000 fine and imprisonment up to one year for violations of priorities.

Biddle told the committee that the original priorities bill was not clear on the power of the President to allocate production facilities, including tools and equipment. He said it may be necessary, for example, "to require particular plants to manufacture particular defense articles."

Biddle further recommended removal of the prohibition in the present requisitioning law against seizure of machinery and equipment which is in actual use and necessary to the operation of a factory or a business.

He said there were instances where such machinery could not be obtained and cited the case of a Norfolk concern owning a gear cutter, which "flatly refused to sell or lease this machine to the Government when asked to do so by a representative of the OPM."

"The Government wanted this machine tool for the manufacture of parts for ships' turbines or parts for antiaircraft machine guns," he said. "The company performs no defense work whatever on this machine. It makes lumber machinery. The company claims that if this machine is made available to the Government it will have the effect of putting them out of business. The OPM pointed out, however, that the gears for the lumber machinery could be cut by some outside machine in view of the very small volume of gear cutting the machine was being used for. The company refused to adopt this suggestion."

Biddle said he hoped the time had long since passed "when we merely talk about an all-out effort and an all-out mobilization of our resources."

Rubber Growing Wild in West, Scientist Says

Berkeley, Calif., Jan. 19 (AP).—On the alkali deserts of the Western States there are 500 million pounds of natural rubber—enough to supply the United States for five months—ready for immediate harvesting, University of California scientists informed the Government today.

This rubber, although not quite as good as the prime product from the East Indies, is entirely satisfactory, the experts reported.

It exists in the rabbit brush, a large perennial shrub which covers vast stretches of the West's great open spaces.

The report was made by Dr. T. H. Goodspeed, noted botanist, and Dr. H. R. Wellman, agricultural economist, to H. R. Tolley, chief of the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics, and Morris S. Rosenthal, assistant director of the Government's War Council.

Dr. Goodspeed said it should be possible to produce rabbit brush rubber for about 45 cents a pound. The nominal price of East India rubber is around 22½ cents.

Murray Shows Skepticism On Labor Peace

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 19.—Slightly skeptical, C. I. O. President Philip Murray today passed on to the C. I. O. executive board the proposal of John L. Lewis for a resumption of C. I. O.-A. F. L. peace conferences.

"If a peace conference should ensue," Murray said, "there should be no Pearl Harbor in the interim in the labor movement."

Making it clear that he and not Lewis, who is president of the United Mine Workers of America, was head of the C. I. O., Murray declared in a statement that any negotiations looking toward an end of labor strife would "necessarily have to be initiated through the office of the president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations."

Green Ready to Act

The Lewis proposal for a reunion in labor's family was directed to both Murray and William Green, A. F. L. president, in letters made public last Saturday. Green already has said that the A. F. L. peace committee stood ready to meet with a similar committee from the C. I. O. at any time.

In a letter to Lewis, Murray said that the latter's peace plan would be presented at a meeting of the C. I. O. executive board in New York January 24 and he expressed belief the board would be pleased to have Lewis attend and present his viewpoint.

Murray was here for the opening of contract negotiations between the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and the four "Little Steel" companies. He made it clear that he would give all his time to these negotiations for the present and "that relegates the question of so-called peace to the status of secondary consideration."

Denies He Was Offered Job

As to reports that he would be offered the secretary-treasurership of a unified labor movement at $18,000 a year, Murray said that he was privileged to speak for himself and that "no one is authorized to trade me in for a job."

"The job is not sufficiently alluring where principles are involved," he added.

Both Green and Daniel J. Tobin declared there was no truth in published reports that any agreement had been reached between Lewis and A. F. of L. leaders whereby George Meany, A. F. of L. secretary-treasurer, would become president of a united labor movement, Green would retire and Murray would become secretary-treasurer.

President Approves $300,000 To Aid War-Made Jobless

President Roosevelt late yesterday approved a budget estimate of three hundred million dollars for weekly unemployment benefit payments to workers displaced in private industries during their conversion to war production.

Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, made the announcement on leaving the White House after a conference with the President and Budget Director Harold D. Smith.

McNutt said the President would send the estimate to the House today with a letter of transmittal to Speaker Rayburn.

The benefit plan, still to be put in the form of a bill, would provide a maximum of $24 a week for 26 weeks to an estimated four million men. The Federal Government would contribute the whole $24 where workers are not now receiving State unemployment compensation. In the case of workers who do receive such State aid, the Government will make up the difference. Workers receiving the benefits would be required to enter a 26-week training course for war industry under the plan.

Congressional leaders and McNutt estimated after a White House conference last Saturday that the total cost to the Government might run between 450 million and 600 million dollars. They explained, however, that this figure might be much less if retooling of plants is accomplished in a shorter time.

"We are going to try to keep within the 300 million dollars," McNutt told reporters.

Dealers Here Bar Stamps From Axis

Philatelists here threw up their hands in "amazement" yesterday.

They replied to a United States Treasury Department statement that a 30 million-dollar Nazi postage stamp "racket" had been destroyed in the United States with the contention that since December 7 no Washington dealer has offered for sale any stamps from Germany, Italy, Japan or the Nazi-occupied countries.

Washington dealers know, it was said by prominent collectors, that since outbreak of the war issues of German and Italian stamps have reached America. Refugees aided in getting the issues here, it was said, and the Treasury contended, in applying a freezing order on such importations, that the Nazis had used monies from the sales to finance sabotage.

A number of dealers disagreed with the figure fixed by the Treasury.

Deichiro Uyeno, 1205 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, said he did not doubt that such stamps as were cited by the Treasury have reached the United States but not in sufficient quantity, he believed, to bring a 20-million-dollar sale.

M. H. Cullen, of 405 Tenth Street Northwest, however, said that the Treasury figure of 20 million dollars is perhaps too low. In the last few years, great quantities of foreign stamps have been handled by New York dealers and the trade here and elsewhere has been amply supplied. Collectors, he stated, have been only too eager to take foreign issues as they appeared. He believed that all issues of Axis origin received in America by any source have been purchased by collectors.

Maury Swartz, of Tudor Hall, was inclined to fix the figure at 12 million dollars. Charles Kohen, of 716 Seventeenth Street Northwest, said the whole subject was overstated. Paul D. Weeks, 1410 H Street Northwest, said that at best the charge of a 20-million-dollas "racket" is 90 per cent off the proper mark. Armand Creed, 937 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, doubted that 20 million dollars worth of stamps ever came into the United States in such a short period of time.

Tax Increase Urged for D. C.

on the regular force.

It will be necessary to purchase uniforms for the auxiliaries and pay them salaries, Commissioner Young said.

Despite the Commissioner's objection, the subcommittee approved the bill and sent it to the full committee.

The net cost of the plan, which generally increases the pay of privates in the Metropolitan, Park Police and White House forces and the fire department about $300 annually, would bring the net yearly cost to the District to $717,656, District Auditor Arthur Pilkerton told the subcommittee.

Chief Engineer Stephen T. Porter of the District Fire Department described the measure as a "grand bill." He said that the local firemen have received no salary increases in 11 years in praising the department as "one of the finest in the country."

He pointed out that in 1930 the department had a total personnel of 902 men, which has been reduced to the present force of 872 men despite the vast population increase in Washington. While there have been more fires in the District, the damage cost has been consistently cut down by the department, he said.

Last week the House voted down a similar measure introduced by Representative Schulte. The revived bill cuts in half the pay increases which the police and firemen would have received under the original measure.

The full House District Committee will meet at 10 a. m. today to consider a bill introduced yesterday by the committee chairman, Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, which would create additional housing space for a total of 1000 hospital beds at Gallinger Hospital and Glenn Dale Sanatorium.

Representative Sasscer (Democrat), of Maryland, yesterday introduced a bill which would permit Federal employes to participate in Federal civil defense work without loss of salary or leave of absence.

"It would give employes the same kind of freedom they have when called for jury duty," Representative Sasscer said in explanation of the measure. It was referred to the Civil Service Committee.

Commissioner Young late yesterday requested Congress for a bill creating a board of fire insurance rates to fix rates for fire and lightning insurance rates in the District.

Sweet Lovers Here Feel Lack of Sugar

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

The wartime pinch on the Nation's sugar resources has already left a mark on the District's sweet tooth, with further curtailments of individual consumption in prospect as the District continues to grow, it was learned last night.

District grocers, candy merchants, and soft-drink dealers have already been forced to turn some of their customers away because they do not have enough sugar to fill the demand. High incomes which have permitted an enormously expanded purchasing power, new residents who add to the demand, and plain hoarding are factors behind the present acute situation here.

Because of the District's increased population, it has received an early taste of the sugar supply shortage. Dealer quotas set on the basis of 1940 purchases did not take into account this population increase, although a survey is now under way to make adjustments.

Dan Holland, manager of the District Coca Cola Bottling Works, reported that his retail outlets are continually running out of supplies of the soft drink. Sol Fishman, president of the District Tobacco and Candy Co., said that "children will just have to eat less candy, because the manufacturers are not sending us enough to fill the demand."

A grocery clerk at the Roosevelt Market, 1519 V Street Northwest, declared: "We don't have any sugar half of the time. If we let customers have sugar one day, we won't let them buy any more for two or three days, but, nevertheless, some people are really piling it up."

Here are some of the things that have already been done or may be done to lighten the blow and provide Americans with adequate supplies of the energy food without hampering the war effort:

Some District grocery stores have begun rationing their customers, limiting purchases to 5 or 2 pounds at a time. Others now refuse to sell to strangers and occasional customers.

OPM last December ordered surplus sugar stocks frozen and restricted dealers to amounts purchased in 1940 when consumption was only slightly above "normal."

Efforts are being made to persuade producers of industrial alcohol who used up the equivalent of a million tons of sugar during 1941 to use corn as their raw material.

Beet sugar producers are being encouraged to produce at maximum capacity. Principal beet sugar States in order of production are California, Colorado, Michigan, Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Utah and Ohio.

Congress has increased sugar subsidies, which has acted to stimulate cane sugar production in Hawaii, Puerto Rico continental United States and the Philippines before invasion. Higher prices also stimulated Cuban production.

Citizens are being urged to hold down consumption as much as possible and refrain from hoarding. Mrs. Roosevelt voiced a plea that substitute energy foods, such as potatoes, be used.

If these controls fail, defense officials have another card up their sleeves—drastic consumer rationing patterned after rationing in Britain. Because such rationing entails a tremendous administrative and enforcement problem, defense officials would prefer not to invoke it.

Whether such drastic rationing comes will depend to a large extent upon whether hoarding continues.

On a national and world-wide basis, we are faced with the reduction in consumption which the loss of one million tons of Philippine production entails. In addition our wartime munitions industry is beginning to eat up larger and larger quantities of raw sugar cane for transformation into alcohol for use in defense industry.

The United States, as arsenal and granary for 26 United Nations at war with the Axis, must allow other countries to secure a quota of sugar for munitions and food.

Attention was focused on the sugar situation by Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard, who made the forthright statement Sunday that "there just won't be enough sugar for our usual consumption" this year.

Department of Agriculture sugar experts are convinced that hoarding reached tremendous proportions during the booming year of 1941.

Between 1932 and 1940, America's average annual sugar consumption was estimated at 6,800,000 tons. In 1940, consumption was placed at 6,900,000 tons, but jumped to 7,900,000 tons in 1941. Of the increase, Agriculture officials say that at least 500,000 tons were held in reserve by jobbers, retailers, and householders.

Hoarding is believed to have started in the beginning of 1941 in spite of the existence of large surplus stocks of raw sugar. By the end of 1941, the surplus stocks had vanished.

Army, Navy May Receive OPM Units

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Donald M. Nelson, war production chief, expected to announce sweeping plans for a reorganization of the whole military procurement setup tomorrow, is reported contemplating an extensive program for "infiltrating" civilian personnel with the Army, Navy and Army and Navy Munitions Board.

The abolition of the OPM under Nelson's plan was seen as a foregone conclusion yesterday, with the prospect that its framework would be retained as part of Nelson's own office, reporting directly to the new War Production Board.

Much of the personnel of OPM, however, it was indicated, would be linked in closer working relationship to the armed services' procurement and production planning offices, and particularly in the joint munitions board.

For example, it was said that almost all the present OPM purchases division would be shifted into the offices of the military departments, with only a small central staff, under Douglas MacKeachie, present director of the division remaining as a procurement unit of the WPB.

Another major reorganization which Nelson is expected to announce is the merging of the OPM production and contract distribution divisions, under the direction of W. H. Harrison, present OPM production chief. Floyd B. Odlum, director of the contract distribution division, was reliably reported as about to resign. His deputy, Walter Wheeler, is expected to remain as deputy to Harrison.

It also was learned yesterday that Wayne Coy, liaison officer of the Office for Emergency Management, had been offered a key post directly under Nelson in the new organization.

Expected to remain as parts of Nelson's office, with their former functions continuing, are the OPM divisions of priorities, labor, materials and civilian supply.

There were also persistent reports yesterday that one of Nelson's first moves would be to appoint a "dictator" to take over the work of converting the auto industry to all-out war production. At present, a seven-man committee, comprised of labor and management representatives, is charged by the OPM to "assist in the development" of conversion plans.

This group is expected to be abandoned, with the responsibility of directing the huge industry's handling of nine billion dollars of war orders placed in the hands of someone selected by Nelson. His choice for the position is not known.

U. S. Prepares To Bolster Latin Defenses

By Michael Chinigo
International News Service Staff Writer

The United States, heartened by the manifestations of hemispheric solidarity at Rio, last night prepared to bolster South America's defenses on land, sea and in the air, should the sister American republics decide on a complete break with the Axis powers and Japan.

Three developments of paramount importance to Latin American defense occurred in Washington. They were:

1. An intimation by Secretary of State Cordell Hull that United States customs restrictions may be lifted to facilitate the flow of military supplies between this country and the Latin American republics.

2. A joint conference, lasting one hour, between President Roosevelt, Secretary Hull and Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff.

3. The disclosure by OPM officials that a new mechanism is being set up to expedite exports of essential materials to the other American republics.

"No Tariff" Plan in Mind

Hull, questioned at his press conference on whether the present "no tariff" arrangement operating between this country and Canada might be extended to Latin America, replied that the spirit of the United States-Canadian agreement would be in the minds of officials if, and when, similar proposals are brought forward between the United States and Latin American governments.

Abrogation fo the existing barriers, State Department officials admitted, would prove invaluable, as the Canadian arrangement has already clearly demonstrated, in expediting large and continuous shipments of war weapons from this country to the Latin Americas.

The speed and extent of offensive-defensive military aid this country can give the nations below the Rio Grande was believed to have been decided in the White House conference between the President, Secretary Hull and Gen. Marshall in reply to requests by Argentina, Chile and Peru that they be assured of "adequate military protection" before severing relations with the Axis.

Many More Supplies to Go

OPM officials, explaining the new Latin American export mechanism, said that it would operate in accordance with the principle enunciated by Welles at Rio and in keeping with allocations of essential materials already earmarked for the southern anchor of hemispheric defense.

These allocations, announced last week by the Office of Production Management, officials asserted, are but a small part of the supplies which are to go to the sister American republics.

Brig. Gen. James L. Frink, deputy quartermaster general and formerly quartermaster for the Fourth Corps Area, has been appointed chief of the Motor Transport Division of the Quartermaster General, the War Department announced yesterday.

Gen. Frink's appointment fills the vacancy caused by the recent transfer of Brig. Gen. Joseph E. Barzynski to be commander of the Chicago Quartermaster Depot. Since Gen. Barzynski's transfer, Col. H. J. Lawes has been acting chief of the Motor Transport Division.

$900 Snatched From Market Manager

A daylight robbery in which an unarmed bandit snatched a bag containing $900, and the theft of narcotics valued at more than $100 from a drug store last night shared feature billing in the District's weekend parade of crime.

Jack Decker, 49-year-old manager of the Belvedere Market, 1309 M Street Northwest, walking south on Ninth Street Northwest with the market's Saturday night receipts when a man approached him from behind, grabbed the money bag from his right-hand overcoat pocket and fled afoot, Decker reported to police.

The incident occurred at 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon in front of 1020 Ninth Street.

Dope Thief Leaves Cash

The dope thief, believed to have been either an addict or dope peddler, who some time between late Saturday night and yesterday morning entered the drug store of Harry Pressman at 3901 Fifteenth Street Northwest and helped himself to a large supply of narcotics, ignored more than $50 which was lying at his finger tips. Entry was gained by forcing the front door with an iron bar, Pressman added.

A father, son, and companion were charged yesterday with robbery in connection with two holdups here last week. The suspects are McKinley Davis, 44, Benjamin Davis, 14, and Pleasant B. Burke, 22, Negroes, of 1331 Sixth Street Northwest.

Police charged they robbed Louis Dorfman at his store, 1426 New Jersey Avenue Northwest, on Wednesday, and attempted to likewise rob Banjamin Solomon, also a storekeeper, at 1012 First Street Northeast. Solomon, however, had a pistol of his own and he captured Burke for police.

Elbridge Fallin, 26, of 523 Kennedy Street Northwest, told police that a boy snatched about $12 in change, and a change carrier valued at $9, as he stopped his Capital Transit Co., bus early yesterday at Seventh and P Streets Northwest to take on passengers. The thief ran west on P Street, the bus driver reported.

Even "Smokes for Yanks" fell prey to the weekend bandits when a jar containing about $10 in change for this fund was stole sometime early Sunday from a Chinese restaurant at 823 Upshur Street Northwest.

George Pang, proprietor of the restaurant, told police that four boxes of cigars which he valued at $10 and a tin can containing about $12 also were removed after entry had been effected by breaking a glass in the front door and then unlocking the door.

Gasoline Station Robbed

Thomas A. Flynn found when he reported to work yesterday morning at a gasoline station at Sixth Street and Indiana Avenue, that someone had removed $93 from the cash box during the night. Entry was made by a duplicate key, he told police.

Jerome Collins, of Brookline, Mass., reported the theft of a suitcase containing clothes which he valued at $40 from his car while it was parked in downtown E Street Northwest some time between 1 a. m. and noon yesterday.

Clothes valued at $19 were stolen some time over the weekend from his room at 456 C Street Northwest, Charles W. Milton reported to police, who also learned from Richard L. McNutt, Congress Hotel, 304 E Street Northwest, that a trunk containing clothing which he valued at $15 had been stolen some time between Sunday night and Monday morning from his parked car in the 300 block of E Street Northwest.

Woman Reports Loss of $200 Wrist Watch

Mrs. Anne Merzel, 2940 M Street Southeast, last night told police she had lost her platinum, diamond-studded wrist watch which she valued at $200.

She said she believed she either lost the timepiece on a streetcar or while walking along the streets between Fourteenth and Pennsylvania Avenue, and Connecticut Avenue and M Street Northwest.

Helen Peters, 2718 Thirteenth Street Northwest, blamed a faulty memory for her misfortune of Saturday.

She told police she had left a black pocketbook, containing $50 in cash and four rings, in a taxicab which she couldn't identify.

Peddler Held In Attack On D.C. Bride

A 32-year-old punchboard salesman was held for investigation last night after police said he had been identified by a young married woman as a man who entered her apartment shortly before noon yesterday, ripped off her dressing gown and then carried her to a back room, where he criminally assaulted her.

The 19-year-old victim, in a state of hysteria, was removed to Gallinger Hospital after she had identified the man, who was arrested shortly after the alleged assault occurred. Police last night did not expect to know until today the results of medical examinations made at Gallinger to corroborate her story. She returned to her home following the examination.

The man held by police denied attacking the young woman, authorities said last night, but admitted trying to put his arms around her. He told police, the latter said, that he was married and had come to the District about four years ago from New York.

According to the story which police said the young woman told them, the victim was alone in her apartment when she heard a knock on the door about 11 o'clock yesterday morning.

On opening the door, she said she was greeted by a man selling punch boards. She had heard of the salesman from neighbors, police said she told them, and admitted him to her apartment.

Almost immediately, she said, the man ripped off her dressing gown and carried her to a back bedroom, where he assaulted her. The victim told police that her assailant warned her against making any outcry and, on leaving, admonished her not to notify police.

After the salesman left, the young woman, who has been married about one year, ran to the apartment of a neighbor, who called police.

Detectives William R. Greenfield and Robert R. Klotz, Precinct No. 11, went to the young woman's apartment and immediately began a search of the area, finding the man who was held last night. He was still selling punch boardds when picked up, the detectives said.

The salesman was taken to precinct headquarters, where the young woman identified him as her assailant.

Fighting Americans

There was never any doubt about the caliber of American opposition on the Bataan Peninsula. Heavy Japanese losses proved its effectiveness. And on several occasions General MacArthur went out of his way, in his terse messages to the War Department, to praise the initiative, resourcefulness and sheer fighting ability of his men. But it remained for an Associated Press correspondent to give us the first graphic description of American operations. In a dispatch published yesterday in this newspaper, Mr. Clark Lee told of his visit to an antiaircraft unit which has apparently established an extraordinary record of planes downed per number of rounds fired. His story deserves rereading because it is the only one by an experienced reporter which gives the reader the genuine "feel" of the situation.

As one would expect, remembering the acts of personal heroism at Pearl Harbor, Wake and in the Philippines before the fall of Manila, Mr. Lee found magnificent morale in the face of overwhelming odds. This, of course, has been true of Allied troops in other war theaters. And the very fact that the underlying optimism of the beleaguered men in Bataan is familiar, is a vivid reminder of the tenacity with which the United Nations are waging this global war. By the same token one cannot help wondering what, if any, relief is in sight for Bataan.

The prospect is admittedly grim. The Japanese control all the approaches, by land, sea and air. Heavy bombers can be flown to Bataan but the greater need is for fighters and for military supplies. If it is not feasible to supply reinforcements, presumably the delaying action will go on as long as possible, with the American forces withdrawing to Corregidor as a last resort. This possibility, considering the quality of our defensive action, is enough to reduce the average red-blooded American to impotent rage. For the men in the line, as for the folks at home, learning to bide our time is unquestionably going to be one of the most cruelly exacting lessons of the war.

Tax-Exempt

In his budget message the President called for Federal taxation of income from all future issues of State and municipal securities. As he says, the higher the tax rates, the more urgent it becomes to close the loopholes by which some individuals avoid payment of taxes. Not only does the privileged status of holders of tax-exempt issues become more and more enviable as taxes mount, but the burden resting upon all other taxpayers is the heavier because of such exemptions. The President also believes—and there is strong legal support for his position—that the income tax amendment to the Constitution can be stretched to cover Federal taxation of income from State and municipal bonds.

To be sure, the taxation of future issues of State and local governments would not immediately produce much additional revenue. But the Administration has rightly refused to advocate taxation of outstanding issues approximating 20 billions of dollars, because to do so would be most unfair to holders of such obligations. However, a good deal of the opposition to taxation of future State and municipal issues springs from a fear that once new issues become taxable, taxation of outstanding issues will soon follow. Certainly the State and municipal governments which are conducting an organized fight against Federal taxation of their obligations would lose all incentive to continue that fight after new issues became taxable. For their chief objection to such taxation is that it would increase the cost of borrowing for them and hamper refinancing operations. That, of course, is an argument that cuts both ways, since artificially low interest rates due to tax exemption may encourage extravagant borrowing by local governments.

Under existing conditions the familiar arguments—political and economic—against Federal taxation of municipals have lost their validity. For years to come, no doubt, Federal taxes will be high and the need for revenue will be pressing. Consequently existing loopholes for legal tax evasion should be plugged, both in fairness to taxpayers and for the sake of revenue. Though the revenue returns will be small at first, they will expand as outstanding tax-exempt issues mature and new taxable bonds take their place.

Russian Campaign

Just over seven weeks have elapsed since the Russians recaptured Rostov and, for the first time since the war began on September 1, 1939, the tide of battle began to move against the Nazis. In those seven weeks the Red army has regained only a relatively small segment of the vast stretch of territory previously lost to the invaders. It is well to remember this fact since it suggests the tenacity with which the Germans have sought to hold their gains and casts doubt on the belief that the Nazi retreat has developed into a rout. In this particular, among others, the parallel between Hitler's venture into Russia and that of Napoleon can easily be pressed too far. Nonetheless, recent developments on the Eastern Front must be regarded as of tremendous actual and potential significance.

Hitler's time-table is now completely out of kilter. He has suffered great losses in men and materiel. The legend of German invincibility has been destroyed beyond redemption. And the strains which the Russian campaign have imposed on German economy, transportation and morale have been considerable. These strains are, moreover, cumulative in effect. What is of greatest importance is that the German retreat continues. Proof of this is to be found in reports from the Crimea, the northern sector and the westward-moving Moscow front.

The Germans claim to have retaken Feodosiya, which they originally took early in November and which the Russians recaptured on December 31. It is evident that Hitler is not prepared to abandon the Crimea without a fight, and for good reason. Loss of the Crimea would put a permanent crimp in any plans he may have for an attack on Turkey as a prelude to a German drive to the Middle East. Already the easing of the pressure on Sevastopol, as a result of Russian counterattacks, marks one of the most important changes on the Eastern Front during the past two months.

Aside from Feodosiya, whose loss the Russians have not yet admitted, the Germans remain everywhere on the defensive. The Russian drive on Schluesselberg, in the Leningrad sector, suggests that, having reopened the principal rail routes between the present and former capitals of Russia, the Red army in the north has been reinforced to the point where it feels strong enough to launch an offensive. If successful, it would imperil a large German force and, by separating the Finns from their allies, compel the latter to sue for peace. At the same time the Russians' pressure on the enemy is increasing in the Ukraine. They now claim to be battering on the gates of Kharkov, the fourth largest city in the Soviet Union. The capture of that great industrial center might enable them to roll up the Nazis' southern flank.

From the viewpoint of the immediate situation on the Eastern Front, however, the development of greatest potential significance is the reported Russian recapture of Mozhaisk, where the Germans had maintained a salient only 56 miles from Moscow. The loss of Mozhaisk may compel the Wehrmacht to retreat to Smolensk. The Germans have thus far failed to establish a stable line. They continue to move back, even though at a slow pace. In consequence, they are subjected to the harassment of Russian attacks as well as to the growing difficulties arising out of climatic conditions which are now at their worst.

Credit Supply

Financial writers are stressing the fact that the war effort is not going to be hampered by any shortage of credit. That is a reassuring reflection. For the Government's 59-billion-dollar spending program will entail a tremendous draft upon the savings and the credit resources of the Nation. Industries called upon to produce guns, tanks and other equipment will require long-term loans and shorter-term credits to expand productive facilities and provide working capital for buying and processing materials. The RFC is prepared to finance firms requiring funds for capital expansion and also to assist them financially in carrying out war contracts, if bank credits are not available. To what extent the war effort will be directly financed by this agency instead of by private banks in the months ahead is, of course, a matter of guesswork. However, during the past year the commercial banks of the country have unquestionably made substantial contributions to the defense effort in the form of expanded credits. For instance, member banks in 101 cities regularly reporting to the Reserve Board increased their commercial, industrial and agricultural loans by $1,700,000,000 during 1941. In the same period these same banks also added nearly $2,600,000,000 to their holdings of United States securities and obligations guaranteed by the United States Government.

What the banks have done is less important, however, than what they are capable of doing to meet the country's credit needs in this time of crisis. On that score there need be no anxiety, for with excess reserves of three and a half billion dollars it is estimated that banks belonging to the Federal Reserve system could safely expand their loans and investments by five times that sum. Furthermore, the Federal Reserve Board has power to lower reserve requirements for member banks, while individual member banks may replenish inadequate reserves by borrowing from their reserve banks. Finally, it is by no means certain that the banks will be called upon this year to supply a greatly increased volume of commercial loans to industry as a whole. For the speed-up of war industries will be counteracted by lessened production of many articles for civilian use, with a resultant reduced demand for certain types of commercial loans.

In addition to their lending operations, the commercial banks will undoubtedly be called upon to invest heavily in Government bonds. Just how great that investment will be depends upon a number of unpredictable factors, such as the size of the Nation's new tax bill and the proportion of new bond issues that can be sold to insurance companies, savings banks and other institutional investors and individuals. Indeed, the success of the Treasury in avoiding an inflationary type of borrowing will be roughly indicated by the percentage of Government securities finding lodgment in commercial banks. There is no question as to the ability of the banks to absorb all the bonds offered them in case of necessity. But, unfortunately, loans floated by sales of bonds on credit to commercial banks create new purchasing power in the form of bank deposits and thus tend to boost prices. The Government relied chiefly upon that type of borrowing operation in the last World War. We know what happened then. If possible, we want to avoid a repetition of that sad experience by relying chiefly upon taxes and bona-fide savings to supply the funds required to meet war expenses.

Progress At Rio

While the main question before the Rio conference—that of a complete break in diplomatic relations between the 21 American republics and the Axis—remains in the discussion stage, progress toward settlement of the century-old Ecuador-Peru boundary dispute is reported. That problem is of immediate concern to Ecuador and Peru alone. Yet from time to time it has led to hostilities and, therefore, to a disruption of that hemispheric peace upon which a working Pan-American order must rest. Its elimination would remove a New World plague spot and be of benefit not only to Ecuador and Peru but to the other nations of this hemisphere as well. Especially for this reason it is encouraging to learn that, as a result of discussions held by the foreign ministers of Argentina, Brazil and Ecuador, a settlement is now believed near. A blessing in itself, such an agreement might have a beneficial effect on the mood of the conference as a whole and thus help to bring about that far-reaching unity which this country and its neighbors are hopeful will emerge from the Rio deliberations.

Burma's U Saw

Burma's Premier, U Saw, must have entertained a very low opinion of British intelligence. He made no pretense of concealing his dealings with the Japanese both before and after the war began. Yet he continued within reach of British authority. Perhaps he felt that because of his position and because of the ticklish situation in Burma he could act with impunity. But the British have disabused him of this idea. By "detaining" him and refusing to permit his return to Burma they have measurably lessened the likelihood of effective Fifth Column work in a strategic area which must be held at all cost. Burma is now under British military control. It is essential to the safe delivery of allied supplies to China. And its maintenance in British hands constitutes a growing threat to the Japanese armies in Malaya and Thailand. Already sorties by air against Japanese positions have been made from Burma. The Japanese in turn are constantly sending over bombers to test Burman defenses. Moreover, savage fighting is reported on Burman frontiers.

Meanwhile, the British can ill afford to countenance any sort of native rapprochement with the enemy. From the British standpoint, U Saw's past record was unsavory, to say the least. When, by his own admission, he continued to cultivate Japanese contacts, war or no war, there was no choice but to take him into custody. There have been occasions in the past, notably in Malaya, when the British have been slow in facing ugly facts—with disastrous consequences. They learn the hard way—but they learn.

Fighting Irish

The fighting Irish! What three words have been uttered more often in prideful boast than these? Few Americans indeed have ever doubted that the people of the Emerald Isle deserved the quality implied—quite naturally enough, knowing so well the characteristics of their own citizens of Irish descent.

And yet, what strange thing is this we see today? The men of Eire will not provide air bases, nor assist in the shipment of food and arms to England, nor in any way promote the Allied cause, so says President De Valera, because the island may be bombed—parachute troops may land—the terrible Nazis may get them!

Can such men be of the same breed of fighting Irish that America has so long known and respected—the Kellys and the O'Briens who, throughout our history, have ever been among the first to strike a blow for liberty against all comers? In the world's most fateful hour, when defeat means the banishment of freedom for all mankind for a thousand years, in the darkest night ever to have enfolded our planet, the fighting Irish of Eire, although it is within their power to render inestimable aid, will not so much as light a single torch to help pierce the stygian gloom.

In commenting upon the President's recent speech, a prominent Senator said, "Any group or nation not aligned with us in the struggle is missing the most glorious moment of history."

And what of the future—when the long cruel storm is ended and victory breaks from behind the clouds with all the dazzling magnificence of a tropic sun? Where will the men of Eire be stationed at the peace table? With what voice will the fighting Irish be heard in the deliberations to determine the final destiny of the peoples of the world under the aegis of the Atlantic charter?

Beyond Farms

The farm bloc—the farm lobby—farmers! Higher prices for farm products and a "go ahead" signal from Congress.

Farm work is not easy, and the average cash income is low. But if farmers do not have enough food—one-third of a family's budget—it is their own fault.

What about the majority of the population not farmers? Work in factories, mines, offices, stores, professions is not easy either. And we cannot raise our own food. Some of us organized in unions are able to get spurts of wage increases by threat or use of strikes.

Most of us are not organized, and get spurts in living costs, but not in income.

Do we have representatives in Congress? Supposedly so! Let us keep in mind that our Congressmen's ears seem to hear only the loudest voices. Let us make ourselves heard.

A majority of the population will and can pay taxes. But a majority squeezed dry by taxes and rising prices cannot win a war. There are others than farmers and Congressmen in this nation. V. J. W.
Hyattsville, Md., Jan. 15.

Hair-Raising Siren

Everyone seems so worried about not being able to hear the air raid sirens. I'll guarantee that if you listen to the hair-raising siren at National Park College in Forest Glen, Md., you'll never forget it. If we had some like that in town here, we would automatically seek shelter, as much from that eerie sound as from enemy planes. Just listen next time someone has a chance. It really serves the purpose. M. BENEDICT.

Licking Japan

Isoroku Yamamoto, now admiral of all the Japanese navy, gained a large measure of fame in Japan because he was credited with the dubious glory of torpedoing the Naval Disarmament Conference in London in 1934. The result of this conference was Japan's withdrawal from the naval limitation agreement with Great Britain and the United States for the maintenance of a 5-5-3 ratio among the three countries. Japan's decision at that time was one of the major storm signals predicting the coming typhoon of Japanese imperialistic conquest. From that time on Japan proceeded with her own secret naval program without any consideration of her pledges for naval ratios and limitations.

During the conversations Yamamoto contended vigorously that the United States fleet had been brought to greater than treaty strength through technical improvements and development of aircraft. The session in which Yamamoto advanced this specious argument was particularly strained and tense.

Admiral William H. Standley, then Chief of Naval Operations, leaned back in his chair and made the jesting offer that he would swap the United States fleet for Japan's and still lick the Japanese. According to an Associated Press report of November 3 both sides of the table roared with laughter and the tension was relieved.

This quip goes much deeper than a tension-relieving joke. Our Navy particularly, and our military leaders generally, have always believed that we could lick Japan because we had more resourcefulness as well as more extensive resources. Japanese treachery temporarily immobilized American resourcefulness. In spite of the early reverses the important fact for us to remember is that our resourcefulness will begin to offset Japan's early advantages before our resources can start tipping the balance in our favor. It is vital to our national morale that we do not forget that we have the greatest resourcefulness of any nation in the world as well as the greatest resources. Wake Island and the Philippines prove this contention. Yes, even as the situation stands today we could still swap navies with Japan and lick her with our superior resourcefulness.

Farm Prices

I would like to bring forth my side of this farm question. I own a large farm in Iowa, valued before the time of Roosevelt in Washington at $100,000 to $150,000. Since 1932, this farm lost me $23,000, most of it in reserves I had saved previous to 1932. But as the banks have a large mortgage at 3 per cent on it, I decided I could meet taxes and interest and living costs easier in a defense job than by trying to farm, with farm prices what they are to the farmer. I'll admit the retailer charges plenty, but both the wholesaler and the retailer take a 100 per cent or more profit.

So I packed up my family and moved to Southern California and am letting my Iowa farm lie idle until such time as I think I can make a living off of it. Whenever the farmers of the East and Middle West find out how easy it is to make $10 to $20 a day at defense work, then there won't be any farmers left. Then what are you going to do for grub?

Night Bike Riding

In our enthusiastic desire to do all we can to help our country, let us not lose our common sense and our sense of proportion. Many persons believed the Board of Education had done just that in requiring women teachers to guard the school buildings at night. Now it would appear that the officials of the Boy Scout organization have lost their common sense and their sense of proportion.

There are many ways in which a child can and should serve his country, without being required to perform tasks which endanger his life, and for which he is entirely too young. I refer particularly to the messenger work which the Boy Scout organization has stated its members are to perform. This involves racing around the streets on bicycles, during all practice blackouts as well as during actual air raids. Parents with any common sense at all realize that bicycle riding at night, even under normal conditions, is highly dangerous, and their children are never allowed to ride after dark. How many, many times this danger is increased under blackout conditions. I am not referring so much to the danger from bombs (which are as likely to hit a child in his home as on the street) as I am to the danger from traffic—for some traffic will move, must move—fire apparatus, police cars, ambulances, and other official cars. To send a lot of early teen age boys to race around the streets on bicycles under such conditions, is to invite mass slaughter of these children.

It is to be hoped the Boy Scout officials will revise their decision. It is well and good that the Scouts should perform special duties in their schools, at first aid stations, feeding stations, etc. Scouts are, on the whole, the best type of boys in America. Some years hence, the men these boys will become will be of great value to a nation weary from war. Let's try to keep them alive—and whole.

What To Do

There are still many Americans wondering what they can do to help promote victory over the Axis. Here are seven suggestions for victory:

1. Save materials and food. Saving scraps may lick the Japs.

2. Buy defense stamps. Stamp out Heel Hitler.

3. Contribute work and money to the Red Cross. Maintain mercy for millions.

4. Train for civilian defense work. Make the home front safe.

5. Be courageous, be cautious, and keep calm. With the will to win, we will win.

6. Be ready to make any sacrifice. Today's sacrifices make tomorrow's victories.

7. Keep the faith. Faith is our strength and our salvation.

Decentralization

Your correspondent's suggestion for putting superstructures on top of the Land Office, Munitions and Navy Buildings sounds excellent. About the only thing needed to complete the confusion in Washington is to uproot thousands of employes and decentralize things. As far as the workers are concerned, moving them does not mean they will necessarily take root. They will have to leave poor old dad or Aunt Betty in a plight, they will be fuming about their property left in the hands of agents and about their children's interrupted schooling and such emotional upheaval will greatly reduce their efficiency. ### Who Remembers?

Some time ago, Marion Grubb contributed a delightful observation to this column titled "Baltimore Morning," which brought home to me in more ways than one the fact that Washington long ago ceased to have its typical "mornings"—or afternoons or evenings, for that matter!

But—who remembers when the little German bands were a part of the summer evening landscape? When their rotund members traveled from one section of the city to another, valiantly striving to burst their cheeks with the earnestness of their blowing? When, sometimes, a neighborhood small boy would nonchalantly suck a lemon in full view of the performers, whose salivary glands immediately reacted disadvantageously to the music?

Who remembers the Saturday mornings at the Old Center Market, at Seventh and B Streets—when old friends seized the opportunity of a weekly chat with each other? When the market was alive with chickens and little pigs, with turkeys and ducks and geese—all adding their clamor to the friendly voices of the marketers? When beautiful perennials and annuals would decorate the flower stalls in season—or at the holiday time, gay wreaths of evergreen and holly, bittersweet and partridge berries? Now we have the more sanitary, perhaps, but surely less friendly streamlined "self-service" markets, with the noisy clank and clatter of the tin "baby carriages" in which purchases are pushed about the store, superseding the soft whisper of shuffling feet before the open stalls of the old market.

Who remembers the magnificent trees that stood haphazardly within the grounds of the Smithsonian Institute, where on a pleasant day one could eat one's lunch beneath their shade, and feed the remnants to friendly squirrels and pigeons?

Who remembers the leisurely tempo of Sunday afternoons, when the sidewalks were filled with promenading Washingtonians, who strolled along the wide avenues and tree shaded cross streets, stopping for friendly greetings with acquaintances? Now the automobile noisily honks along, arrogantly shooing pedestrians out of the way.

Who remembers the organ grinders who were as much a part of the spring landscape as the weeping willows about the Speedway? The plaintive airs ground from their mechanical depths always brought a nostalgic longing, somehow, for the canals of Venice, even though the most one knew of those canals had been gleaned from school textbooks. Now, there is one lone organ grinder in the city, who nevertheless brings a breath of spring and of the slopes of Sunny Italy to the neighborhood where he happens to stop.

And who remembers the street singers who raised tuneful voices in questionable harmony on summer evenings? Who remembers the one singer with the "magnificent tenor" voice, whose "O Sole Mio" brought tears to the eyes of the listeners? I wonder where he is now!

Who remembers the old Poli's Theater, scene of many triumphs of the legitimate stage, as well as of concert and orchestra?

Who among us can recall without too much effort the fleet of carriages which were parked regularly around Lafayette Square, and whose ebony-hued drivers strutted about in top hats and frock coats, brandishing "buggy whips" much as a high-stepping drum majorette brandishes her baton?

And where are the double-decker buses gone, which used to furnish the means for many a cool summer evening ride? And the "open-air" street cars, which appeared on the tracks when the weather was sufficiently warm?

The record would not be complete if mention were not made of the Sunday school picnic excursions down the river on the old "Charley Mac" to Marshall Hall; when families would struggle aboard the boat, laden with baskets and boxes of food—and hardly be fairly started on the trip before the small fry would be almost too hungry to speak. Then the hampers were opened and a piece of chicken or a hunk of cake, an apple or a banana would be apportioned to the children, so that by the time the picnic grounds were reached, the amount of food had been appreciably lessened. To make the day's pleasure complete, it would either rain, or Johnny or Sally would become very sick, and the whole family would reach home very much the worse for wear.

Of course, in this connection, the moonlight excursions aboard the same steamer should come in for a wistful sigh, for although there are still excursion steamers, and still moonlight trips on the river—they are not quite the same!

Ah yes! If only one need not ask "Who remembers?" but instead could point to the visible landmarks, the "current" traditions, the native Washingtonians! But Washington is rapidly becoming an ultra-modern city of apartment houses and business buildings, whose straight lines and angled windows blink in stately aloofness in the rays of the setting sun; with Government buildings rapidly outpacing that of private industry and as each new white structure "opens for business"—some old landmark becomes but a memory.

PEARL RILEY SEAL.

Service Pay

Midst rumors of staggering war expenditures, constantly and sharply rising commodity prices, Red Cross needs, Defense Bonds and Stamp purchase urgings, increased wages for union members, defense workers and civil service employes, may I inquire, as the wife of an officer, when members of the armed forces, who, I believe, are at least theoretically charged with the responsibility of fighting this war, and existing in the meantime, may expect some favorable Congressional action on their bills for increased pay and allowances?

Organize The White House For War

THERE HAS been some progress in making the Government better fitted to conduct the war. But we shall be making a very serious error, if we now relax and assume that the appointment of Mr. Nelson is anything more than the beginning of the conversion of the Government itself from a peacetime to a wartime basis.

LIPPMANN

For the moment let us assume that the establishment of the Nelson office by the Executive order is sufficient. For the moment let us choose not to make too much of the fact, noted on Monday by Mr. Ernest Lindley, that Mr. Knudsen's appointment in the War Department was made not by Mr. Nelson but by the President in a separate action. For even if Mr. Nelson's authority is really final and comprehensive in the field of the production and procurement of munitions, there remain large and vitally important fields of Government which cannot be left as they are now organized.

MR. NELSON'S field is the supplying of the armed forces. But there is a lot more to total war than that, and when we look beyond Mr. Nelson's province at all the great things that must be done, it is evident that the President is still carrying a burden of responsibility which is beyond the capacity of any human being to do well.

Mr. Roosevelt is the Commander in Chief, which means that he must make the great strategic decisions, military, political, and diplomatic, in continual consultation with our allies. In the whole history of mankind there has never before been a war that was actually world-wide, with so many theaters of war, with such immense and complicated coalitions on both sides.

This is a responsibility which in the last analysis the President cannot delegate: he alone can make the final choice of the commanders in the field and he alone can make the momentous agreements which have to be made with Churchill, Stalin, and Chiang Kai-shek.

BUT MR. ROOSEVELT is also the Chief Executive, which means that the immensely difficult domestic problems of the Nation in wartime come up to him through many regular departments—the Treasury, Agriculture, Commerce, Labor, Justice—and through many emergency offices and independent agencies which deal with civilian defense, social security, price control, transportation, housing and the like. The problems here are not routine: on the contrary they are novel and difficult because on the one hand, the Japanese successes have deeply injured our internal economy, and on the other hand, because the more Mr. Nelson mobilizes industry for war, the more acute and far-reaching will be the effect on civilian life.

The problems of the depression and of the recovery from it were child's play compared with the domestic problems which the war presents. It is inconceivable that Mr. Roosevelt can direct a world war as Commander in Chief and also manage the domestic consequences of a world war.

BUT Mr. Roosevelt is also the leader of the Nation in a time of great trial, and this is by no means the least, indeed it is ultimately the greatest of all his tasks. It is a task that he cannot delegate—except in part as he turns over to Mr. Nelson the whole responsibility for supplying the armed forces and to someone else the larger part of the responsibility in domestic affairs.

For it is necessary that the President should in a crisis of this kind remain close to the people and to their representatives in Congress. On the supreme questions of war and peace, of suffering and sacrifice, successes and failures, they will listen only to him. They must hear from him often, and not only in formal statements drafted by others but in talks which, like the great speeches of Churchill, give them the conviction that they are in the confidence,—military secrets aside—of the Commander in Chief. This indispensable work cannot be done by a man entangled in the details of price control, agriculture, taxes, labor relations, housing, the treatment of enemy aliens, doubtful aliens, and friendly aliens.

IT IS as necessary for the President to divest himself of immediate personal responsibility for these domestic matters as it has been necessary for him to do what he has, we hope, done in appointing Mr. Nelson. He needs a deputy to the Chief Executive for domestic affairs, someone to clear his desk of these matters, someone to take the primary responsibility for them, someone to free his own time and let him concentrate his energy upon his own supreme business—that of leading the people and of being the Commander in Chief.

The urgent need for some such reorganization has been shown clearly by a number of things that have happened recently.

THERE IS the incident of Secretary Knox's speech to the Conference of Mayors in which by entering the field of the highest strategy—the field that is preeminently and exclusively the President's—Col. Knox inadvertently has caused serious uneasiness in China, in the Netherlands Indies, in Australia, perhaps in India, perhaps even in Russia. That kind of thing could not have happened if the President himself had his attention clearly fixed on his own duty as Commander in Chief, and had established the proper discipline among his subordinates.

THERE IS the complicated affair of the price control bill—on the one hand the pressure of the farm bloc which resulted in the deplorable O'Mahoney amendment, and quite separately the greatly misunderstood and wholly unnecessary controversy between Secretary Wickard and Mr. Henderson.

All this trouble has arisen from the fact that the President could not put his mind on the problem, and no one else had the power to speak for him. The farm bloc got out of hand while Mr. Roosevelt was conferring with Mr. Churchill. Mr. Wickard and Mr. Henderson got into a dispute because there was no one above them both to understand and insist that they were both right, but that each was looking at only one side, rather than at both sides, of the same question.

THERE IS the affair of Secretary Wickard's radio announcement that there will be a shortage of sugar, which is true but can lead only to hoarding,—an announcement which should never have been made until the Government was ready to announce also a rationing system to deal with the shortage. There is the affair of the Office of Civilian Defense, which has never known what it was doing, what it was meant to do, what it had power to do, or who was to do it. There is the great vacuum where there ought to be a responsible agency planning what is to be done to transport the people back and forth to work as automobiles have to be put in dead storage.

All of these are matters which require authority and direction from the Chief Executive. But since one man cannot do all that is now required of the Chief Executive, they will be left undone, or done badly and too late, if there is not some sort of deputy to the Chief Executive.

IT WOULD be possible to cite many more examples. One final example should be mentioned. In the conduct of war of this character there must be propaganda abroad, and in our peculiar position, the whole question of the treatment of aliens is closely related to diplomacy, and is fraught with the highest and most far-reaching consequences not only here at home but abroad. The handling of these matters is dispersed among several departments and agencies, operating on different principles and under no coherent and central control.

The Department of State, the Department of Justice, Mr. Sherwood's New York branch of Col. Donovan's office, and Mr. Rockefeller's office are all concerned. But it is not even probable that each knows what the other is doing. It is certain that in this vitally important, but subtle and intricate, field of action there is no one who is in command, no one who is at once sufficiently in the President's confidence and yet also invested with enough authority to conduct the psychological war.

Story Of Rubber

By H. G. Moulton

Industrial Growth

This is the first of a series on the history of rubber and its present status in commerce and industry.

THE TERM rubber is applied to any material which possesses a marked degree of elasticity and can be vulcanized, thereby including not only the ordinary rubber of vegetable origin, but also a wide range of synthetic compounds, having entirely different chemical compositions and somewhat different properties.

The ordinary rubber of commerce is composed principally of cautchouc, mixed with varying amounts of resins and other minor impurities. Cautchouc is a compound of carbon and hydrogen with the chemical formula $(C_5H_8)_x$. It occurs in nature in solution in a juice called latex, which occurs in a number of tropical trees, in all the living cells of certain types of brush growing wild in Mexico, and to a lesser extent in the juices of a wide range of other types of plants.

The development of rubber commenced with the discovery of America. The Indian populations of Mexico, Central and South America made some use of rubber, apparently for the manufacture of elastic balls, and this use appears to have been observed by Europeans as early as 1520. The first Europeans to realize the commercial importance of rubber were two French scientists who sent samples of it to Paris as early as 1736. Thereafterwards the famous English chemist, Priestley, called attention to this substance in 1770 and stated that it was adapted to the purpose of erasing pencil marks. From this first commercial use the name rubber developed and the material was called India rubber because of a supposed origin in India. At that time rubber sold at about $175 per pound, which compares with a present price of 22½ cents per pound.

The next forward step was the development of the use of rubber for waterproofing cloth by an Englishman in 1791, and this marks the beginning of the commercial use of this substance.

The first rubber factory in the world was established in 1811 in Vienna. Thereafter rubber factories were established in England in 1820, in Scotland in 1823 and in the United States in 1833. In the meantime some simple forms of rubber manufacture, confined principally to bottles and shoes, had been established in Brazil as early as 1800 and this primitive industry further developed into the manufacture of bulbs and waterproof fabrics for export to the United States and Europe.

THE NEW industry in the United States grew rapidly for a while, but soon came to grief because of the fact that proper methods of treatment were not yet known and the manufactured goods melted into ill-smelling masses under summer heat; the collapse of this growing industry was expedited by the panic of 1837.

Thereafter the industry started fresh on firmer foundations primarily through the discovery by Nathaniel Hayward of the beneficial effects of the addition of sulphur, but principally because of the invention of vulcanizing by Charles Goodyear.

The fundamental basis for successful rubber manufacture is the combination of rubber with sulphur at a high temperature, and this was Goodyear's famous discovery, said to have been made through the accidental charring of some pieces of fabric coated with rubber and sulphur on a hot stove.

THE MODERN rubber industry stems from this fundamental invention of Charles Goodyear in 1839—the process of vulcanization, which is the application of heat, at temperatures of 160 to 280 degrees Fahrenheit, to a mixture of rubber and sulphur, originally with a sulphur-rubber ratio of 2½ to 10 per cent sulphur for softer articles, and one-third or more of sulphur for hard rubber articles, such as combs or knife handles. It was this process that made rubber stable and durable over a wide range of temperature, and thereby practical for everyday use.

In later years there were introduced a number of variations and improvements which have contributed greatly to the industry, such as the introduction of organic accelerators, and the use of many types of organic or mineral compounds as fillers, coloring material or for the addition of particular properties. Through these the use of sulphur has been reduced to smaller percentages—as little as 1 per cent for thin sheetings and 3 per cent for automobile tire treads, though ranging up to 45 per cent for very hard rubber compounds. There was also developed a method of cold vulcanization through the use of various sulphur-bearing chemicals, and more recently direct processes for coating, impregnating fabrics and forming rubber threads directly from latex, and there has been a successful development of electro-deposition of rubber from latex for coating purposes.

The rubber industry got under way not long before the Civil War, about 1840, but even by 1890 was still one of very small proportions. In that year the world production of rubber was only 30,750 tons and the United States imports only 15,336 tons, and the average United States price for crude rubber was 84 cents per pound, and up to that time the use of rubber was confined almost wholly to the manufacture of boots and shoes, waterproof clothing, fire and garden hose, erasers and elastics.

DURING the next decade the widespread use of bicycles with pneumatic tires brought a great stimulus to the industry. In 1900 the world production of rubber had increased to 48,000 tons, United States imports to 23,026 tons, and the price to 98 cents per pound. Up to this time and for nearly ten years thereafter all of the rubber production was from wild rubber trees, in tropical areas, principally from the Amazon valley.

Shortly after 1900 came the crude beginning of the automobile that was to revolutionize our transportation, motive power, warfare and even our modes, and our codes of thought, behavior and dress, and make giants out of our infant rubber and petroleum industries, and with the automobile came a new market for the pneumatic tire, already developed for the bicycle.

It is curious to note that Charles Goodyear, the father of the rubber industry, had some vision of the possible future use of rubber for tires, for in the early 1850's he suggested rubber rims or casings for the wheels of wheelbarrows. His vision has come into literal fruition today in the widespread use of balloon tires on wheelbarrows in construction and mining operations.

THE FIRST impact of the automobile industry put a severe strain on the wild rubber industry of the tropics. The price of rubber moved steadily upward, reaching a peak of $3.25 per pound in April, 1910, and the infant automobile industry would have come to a halt because of lack of an adequate supply of and excessive prices for rubber, except that there soon came to fruition another vision of 30 years' standing—plantation rubber from the Far East.

The first plantings of rubber trees for cultivation were made in Ceylon as early at 1876, though commercial production from plantations did not commence until about 1905. The first shipments of any moment were in 1910, in which year out of a world production of 95,000 tons, some 10 per cent was plantation rubber. And thereafter the entire increase in production was from cultivated sources, and the wild rubber industry went into a decline.

The growth of the rubber business, made possible by the combination of the automobile and the plantation rubber production, is indicated by the following figures:

| | World Production | U. S. Gross Imports | Average Price Per Lb., N. Y., Cents |
|---|---|---|---|
| | —Long Tons Rubber— | | |
| 1910 | 94,500 | 48,263 | 307 |
| 1915 | 185,000 | 101,093 | 66 |
| 1920 | 295,000 | 233,480 | 36 |
| 1925 | 338,000 | 400,433 | 72 |

Wartime Washington

By Merlo Pusey

The Source Of Our Predicament

THE CENTRAL fact to be kept in mind about Washington these days is that it cannot act to meet an emergency. All the city can do is to make its needs known. In due course Congress may find time to give them some attention. Or it may not. But in any event, the most that can be expected of local officials is that they engage in a big song and dance to attract the interest of higher-ups to the city's plight.

PUSEY

Just now there is a great deal of interest in health, welfare, housing and education in the Capital because many people are beginning to realize that neglect of these essentials carries dangerous underlying implications for the war program. Men and women must have some place to live in this community if they are going to serve their Government here. They must be protected against the ravages of tuberculosis, syphilis and other uncontrolled diseases. That is the basic reason why Federal officials are bestirring themselves to correct conditions which would otherwise probable go unnoticed.

Any improvement that can be secured because of this aroused interest will be much appreciated. The voteless residents of the Nation's Capital will not be inclined to look a gift horse in the mouth. Yet it is as clear as an Arizona sky that Washington's problem cannot be solved by any emergency program that may be designed.

PRESENT attempts to save the city from the dangerous consequences of the crisis now approaching, lag far behind the rapid march of events. The present struggle is concerned entirely with the appropriation of funds and the granting of powers to meet demands that are already acute. What of the demands that are accumulating day by day? Budget Director Harold Smith forecasts the migration of 250,000 additional persons to the city in 1942. Before the present emergency has been met, a new emergency will be staring us in the face. And once more the city will be helpless to meet it.

The simple fact is that Washington's governmental machinery is hopelessly inadequate to cope with the wartime requirements that are laid upon the city. In a previous article I pointed out how the routing of all District legislation through a third legislative chamber, the Budget Bureau, tends to restrain and discourage, if not to hamstring, the local authorities. There are endless difficulties, too, in the city's dependence upon Congress for every dime it spends. And even in the District government itself there are bottlenecks that put efficient administration of local affairs beyond the sphere of reasonable expectations.

A striking example of how the local government is divided against itself is to be found in the Board of Public Welfare. This unpaid board has control of institutions and agencies which feed, clothe and house about 5000 persons. It is responsible for their care and in many instances their proper training and supervision. Yet it cannot appoint its own employes, make its own budget, or properly supervise the work for which it is held accountable.

Last summer the key position in this setup, that of director of public welfare, remained vacant for three months because the Commissioners and the board were deadlocked over the appointment. Now that a competent director, Mr. Conrad Van Hyning, is on the job he is severely handicapped by the lack of an organization and equipment to carry out a modern welfare program.

It is an amazing fact that the agencies and institutions operating under this board have no uniform standards. For the most part they operate as separate entities, with little supervision or coordination of their programs. There is, for example, no interchange of experience on diet, the cost of food or medical care. There is no joint planning of educational or recreational programs. Experimentation may be carried on in the same field by two different agencies without cooperation or coordination of their findings.

INSTEAD of having a welfare system, therefore, we have a group of loosely related institutions each going its separate way. Even more shocking is the fact that the great majority of these institutions in the Nation's Capital have nothing constructive to offer their inmates. Our training schools offer no training that is worthy of the name. In reality they are little prisons for minors. Their designation as training school is at once a sop to the conscience of Congress and a device to lull the voteless citizens of the Capital into complacence.

Nothing need be said here about the disgrace that has been brought upon the city by the Home for the Aged and Infirm at Blue Plains. The important fact is that the blight which has fallen upon Blue Plains may be traced through most of the city's welfare institutions. They are the victims of the bungling and incompetent governmental setup through which we are now trying to meet a grave emergency in the Nation's Capital.

Quick action should be taken, of course, to relieve the conditions this faulty system has produced. But it would be inexcusable folly to leave the chief cause of the approaching crisis untouched when remedies are applied. In the case of the Board of Public Welfare, it should certainly be obvious by now that no unpaid board meeting once a month can properly supervise an organization that is caring for 5000 persons. At least some improvement could be made by turning over that job to the District Commissioners who are full-time officials.

The most useful function the Board of Public Welfare could perform would be the setting of community standards for the administrative officials to meet. At present members of the board are discouraged from criticizing the shortcomings of the disjointed system they control, for any criticism reflects upon themselves. If they were merely an advisory body, they could make their influence felt by voicing the community's demands for higher standards without assuming responsibilities which they have no power to meet.

SO IT IS not enough to think of this local emergency in terms of more money for municipal services. Increased appropriations for new streets, sewers, for public health, welfare institutions, for housing and schools are the first imperative step. But these will be equivalent to a shot in the arm unless they are followed by a direct attack upon the chaotic system which passes by the name of government in the Capital City.

Washington is suffering from a chronic ailment which has merely been intensified by the extraordinary stresses of wartime. What the city needs most of all is a government capable of planning ahead and of prompt action to meet crises when they arise. The failure of Congress to end the present experiment in frustration years ago makes it imperative that Congress give its own time, in the midst of a war, to Washington's municipal shortcomings. That fact alone should sufficiently emphasize the necessity of looking to the source of this predicament, while immediate relief is being granted.

New Taxpayers Sensitive To Graft

NOW THAT the income tax has become a democratic institution, affecting some seven million new subjects in income brackets as low as $800 a year, the Treasury seriously hopes to banish from the public mind the concept of the taxpayer created by Will Johnstone, the cartoonist, who pictures him as a scrawny little man wearing nothing but a barrel held up by suspenders and always in a hot fury over the waste of his tax money by public officers. Our friends at the Treasury believe the new members of the lodge will be eager to pay their bit not only to buy the tools of war but to stand off inflation. This is the first time the Treasury has seemed to care what the income taxpayer thought about anything. Always hitherto he was treated as a rich man who probably had stolen or inherited his money and the bureaucrats of the New Deal laughed raucously at his futile complaints. I remember an encounter with a former newspaperman who had been drafted into the long and extravagant war on poverty as an aid to Jim Farley for duties mostly political who said rather mockingly, "Why don't you pay your income tax and quit squawking?"

PEGLER

I HAD paid my income tax and I was squawking because $6000 a year of the taxes paid by me and others was being paid to a relative of a prominent idealist for decorating embassies abroad; $8000 a year had been paid to Theodore (The Man) Bilbo, a stranded Mississippi politician, to clip and paste newspaper items in scrapbooks, and to keep him off the neck of Pat Harrison; $10,000 was being paid to Jimmy Roosevelt to act as one of his father's secretaries and keep out of mischief and countless other high salaries were being paid to other personal and political friends and relatives of high personages as a sort of de luxe dole or handout or, not to fumble for a word, gravy. Everyone in Washington has personal knowledge of many such ill-disguised gifts of large salaries to individuals whose duties are only theoretical, nominal or unnecessary, and the same generosity has now spread out over the country. Look in the local phone book of any fairly large city under the heading "U. S. Government" and observe the growth of government, part of which has been legitimate and natural, but much of which represents nothing but political generosity and waste at the expense of the income taxpayer and those who had paid other taxes all along. A salary of $6000 or $10,000 a year is no mere nickel. It is thick money.

BUT, UNDER the old scale of brackets, the income tax was a class tax, and those who paid it were deemed lucky to have that much income and poor sports to ask what was done with the money. And anyone who asked too insistently and clamorously could expect a call from one of the detective-accountants of the Internal Revenue, who would go over all his personal items and even demand an explanation of his spendings, which were none of the Treasury's business, as well as of his earnings. This is literal truth. The income taxpayers were a small and politically friendless minority, and the Government itself created the figure in the barrel, whom it is now desired to retire from the scene lest the new and much larger group of taxpayers come to regard the tax as a burden.

The Treasury people are correct in their belief that the new income taxpayers will be quite willing to pay the tax for war purposes. The old group has the same spirit and, with very few exceptions, has been willing all along to pay legitimate costs of government, including the expense of new departments honestly intended to ease the Nation over the long panic. But neither group will be happy to continue to support innumerable political press agents on better salaries than they ever were worth in private industry merely because they are politically right. Neither group will willingly contribute money out of earnings and go through the vexation of making out returns so that useless, extravagant and ornate Government reports may be turned out in the form of bound books singing the praises of this or that Cabinet member. And nobody will be more sensitive to waste or graft than those new taxpayers, hitherto exempt, who gladly shower down, say, $25, with the understanding that they are paying for a war and then read that a Malcolm Cowley, identified as a poet and long identified with the Communist Front, has suddenly been deemed indispensable to the war effort as an "analyst of defense information" at $8000 a year, which represents the entire income taxes of 320 of those $25-a-year taxpayers.

The angry little guy in the barrel should not typify the income taxpayer, but it is up to the Government to show him that his money is being spent for legitimate purposes.

Liquidated Firm Held Liable For Labor Board's Orders

By the Associated Press

The Supreme Court held yesterday that a Labor Board order which directed a company to reinstate certain employes with back pay could not be set aside merely because the concern had gone out of business.

Evidence that the company has been liquidated is immaterial, the court said, because the board's order applied not only to the company but to its "officers, agents, successors and assigns" and therefore it "may yet be the basis—and the indispensable basis—of liability on the part of any of these persons." The court did not decide, however, whether this actually was the case.

The case involved the Southport Petroleum Co., of Texas City, Tex., which was ordered by the board in August, 1938, to reinstate with back pay three employes allegedly discharged for union activity and to take certain other action. In June, 1939, the company entered a stipulation with the board agreeing to comply with the order except in regard to back pay, and the board accepted.

The board charged that the company failed to carry out any terms of the stipulation, however, and in April, 1940, petitioned the Circuit Court of Appeals for enforcement of its order. The company then sought to reopen the case before the board to show that four days after making the 1939 stipulation it had distributed all its assets to its four stockholders as a liquidating dividend and that two stockholders who received the refinery transferred it to a new Delaware corporation.

Evidence Refused

The Circuit Court refused to permit the company to adduce this evidence and this ruling was upheld by the Supreme Court, 6 to 2, with Justice Jackson writing the majority opinion. Chief Justice Stone and Justice Reed dissented and Justice Roberts did not participate.

The Supreme Court also upheld the conviction of Norton I. Kretake, former assistant United States attorney at Chicago, and Alfred E. Roth, a private lawyer, on fraud conspiracy charges growing out of alleged bribery in connection with prosecutions of liquor law violators. The conviction of another former assistant United States attorney, Daniel D. Glasser, in the same case was reversed and a new trial ordered on the ground that Glasser did not have the effective assistance of counsel.

The court dismissed the appeal of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers (ASCAP) from a decision that the society had violated the Sherman antitrust law and therefore was not entitled to bring suit attacking a Washington State law regulating the use of copyrighted music.

The court dismissed the appeal of Texarkana, Tex., from a decision denying interest on part of refunds made to Texas consumers by the Arkansas-Louisiana Gas Co.

Tax Appeal Denied

The court ruled that a Federal income tax may be imposed on the Joliet & Chicago Railroad Co. for dividends and Federal income taxes paid from 1931 to 1934, inclusive, by the Chicago & Alton Co., which "leased" the former line.

The National Labor Relations Board was granted a review of a decision setting aside its order directing the Nevada Consolidated Copper Co. to reemploy workers allegedly discriminated against. The board appealed from the Tenth Federal Circuit Court.

A Federal district court's determination that James H. Halliday, of Anderson County, S. C., was totally and permanently disabled while his $10,000 war risk term insurance was in force and hence entitled to collect $57.50 a month since 1919 from the Government, was upheld.

The Life of # Capt. Colin P. Kelly, Jr.

The Washington Post presents this series on the life of Colin P. Kelly, jr., from first-hand information given by the parents and the widow of the war hero, as well as boyhood friends and neighbors in his home town. The widow of Capt. Kelly, who has unsparingly given her services to the Red Cross, has declined all offers of remuneration as a result of her position after her husband's heroic death.

CHAPTER III

Distinguished Ancestry

By Carol Frink

As Told by His Parents and Widow

MADISON, Fla., Jan. 19.—Colin was not the first Kelly to sink a battleship.

Strangely enough, his grandfather, Lieut. James C. Kelly was credited with "assisting in sinking a warship" at Fort Fisher, off the coast of North Carolina, during what, south of the Mason-Dixon Line is always referred to as "The War Between the States."

Lieut. Kelly and three of his brothers (one of whom was named Colin) enlisted in the Confederate Army at the start of the war, and remained "for the duration." Colin's grandfather was wounded at Fort Fisher in the Battle of Bentonville, but recovered to found the Florida branch of the Kelly family. His musket, a treasured heirloom, hangs over the Kelly's mantel now.

Also, strangely enough, the Kellys did not come from Ireland.

The father of James Kelly mentioned above—that would be Colin's great-grandfather—was one of four little children who came with their parents to this country from Scotland in 1770. And their father, Archibald Kelly, brought with him to Clarkton, S. C., where he settled, a curious document which is now on record in the archives of the old Brown Marsh Church in that town.

THE documnet reads: "That the bearer, Archibald Kelly, his spouse, Catharine, Florence, James and Mary Kelly, their children, lived from their infancy in the parishes of Killean and Killkenzie and behaved themselves soberly, honestly and inoffensively, free of scandal and church censure and may be received into any Christian society or congregation where God in His providence may order.

"Attested in the name and by appointment of session at Rosshill the 13th day of August, 1770, years by

"Robert Tomson, Mins.,
"Donal Clark, Sess. Clerk."

An illustrious relation on the Kelly side of the family was James McNeil Whistler. Colin's parental grandmother was a McNeil, of South Carolina, and she was a cousin to "Whistler's Mother," the lady of the famous Whistler painting. Thus Colin was a fourth cousin of the painter. Incidentally, Whistler's father, and his mother's brother, were both West Pointers.

The Archibald Kelly who brought his children, and his "spiritual letter of credit" to Clarkton, S. C., from Scotland arrived here in time for a ringside seat in the Revolutionary War. He was too old at the time to take an active part, but he hired a soldier to take his place—a custom of the time. The musket that hangs over the Kelly mantel here went through that war, and later, according to a tag fastened to it, did service in the War of 1812. It also was "a menace to deserters and robbers during the War Between the States." In its early years it was fired with a flint and steel; it was changed over to a percussion hammer in 1866. It also has a record of having killed five deer with a single shot—so the tag claims.

COLIN'S paternal grandfather, James C. Kelly, and his three brothers (one of whom, Colin Kelly, was Capt. Colin P. Kelly's godfather) were all officers in the Confederate Army. His grandfather, a first lieutenant, was wounded twice, at Fort Fisher, and at the Battle of Bentonville. He was born in Bladen County, N. C., but lived for the last three years of his life in Madison, Fla.

Irish descended Americans all over the country have hailed Capt. Colin P. Kelly as one of their own, and there is really some substantiation to their claim. For, although his father's people were Scotch, Colin inherited quite a lot of Irish from his mother's side of the family. His maternal grandmother was Emmala Parkhill, and the Parkhills were Irish

Colin's mother was a Mays, of Monticello, Fla. The first Mays to cross the Atlantic—and my source is the Madison County Historical Society—was William Mays, who came to the Virginia Colony in 1611, in the ship sent back by Lord Delaware with supplies and additional settlers to revive the fading courage of those who had founded Jamestown in 1607.

The founder of the Florida branch of the Mays family, directly descended from that of William Mays, was Richard Johnson Mays, who was born in Edgeville County, S. C., in 1808, and came to Clifton in 1864.

This was Capt. Kelly's great-grandfather, and though he died long before young Colin was born, the boy who was to become the first hero of the war in the Pacific was well acquainted with the great plantation home his great-grandfather built.

For this house, Clifton, with its great estate, is a historical landmark in Florida. Situated only 20 miles from Madison, the house stood until 1931 when it was burned to the ground.

COLIN'S great-grandfather, like the first Mays to come to this country, was a preacher. At the age of 21 he married 14-year-old Eliza Anne Williams, and with their first child, Elizabeth, came to Florida with "their slaves, household goods, tools, and supplies" in covered wagons.

Here, at Clifton, they had 11 children, and one of them was Dannitte Hill Mays, Colin's maternal grandfather.

Colin was born in the Monticello home of this grandfather, a Congressman from the Third Florida District, a circumstance that gave him a special claim on this grandson. He was his grandfather's pet child. Grandpa Mays called Colin "Billy," and "The Redhead." (Like the flier's son, "Corky," Colin had sandy red hair as a baby.)

SCENE OF HIS CHILDHOOD—Colin P. Kelly, jr., at the age of 5, shown with his sister, Emmie, on the steps of his family's Madison, Fla., home

All Christmases were spent with Grandpa Mays, and many weeks of the long summer vacations, as well. Here, under the banana trees in the Mays garden Colin played through many a sunny Florida afternoon, and here, in the Mays farmyard, he loved to dress in overalls and scuffed shoes, like his little Negro playmates, and "help" with the plantation cores.

Here, at Christmas time, Colin, his little sister, Emmie, and his young cousins, shot off the firerakers that, to a Southern child, means Christmas rather than the Fourth of July. One evening just as dark had fallen, they were all in the yard preparing to light their fireworks with the help of Uncle Parkhill Mays, Mamie Kelly's brother.

Parkhill, now a lawyer in Monticello, was a young man then, and he looked, the Kelly's tell me, very much as Colin did at the time of his death. Like Colin, he was quick of movement, hearty in his laughter, and full of mischief. Parkhill sent the little children back to the woodpile to gather a load of "splinter wood" for a bonfire. Then, running through the house and grabbing a bedsheet on the way he arrived at the woodpile in time to scare the children who thought he was a "sure-'nough" hant, as he hoped they would.

GRANDPA MAYS had an old white horse, named Nellie Bly. That was Colin's constant companion during these visits to the Mays plantation. At the end of the summer Colin was 8 years old, he made such a fuss about leaving Nellie Bly to go to school in Madison, that Grandpa Mays softened and gave the horse to him, on one condition.

"You can have the horse if you think you can ride her home," said Grandpa Mays.

That was a large order for the short-legged "Billy," but he was a child who didn't let difficulties stand in his way.

Colin's mother said, "Father, you'll kill the boy," but Grandpa Mays insisted that if Colin wanted Nellie Bly, he'd have to ride her the 30 miles to Madison.

Colin started the long, lonely trip through the pine woods and the tobacco fields gallantly astride the cumbersome old steed. At the halfway mark Mamie Kelly secretly awaited her little son with water and oats for the horse, and sandwiches and a malted milk for the little traveler. Her hunch was that Colin would be glad to take the family car at that point, and let somebody else ride Nellie Bly the rest of the way. She reckoned without the grit and determination of Colin Purdie Kelly, jr.

DUST-COVERED and travel-stained, the boy and horse arrived where Mamie Kelly waited in the family car; but after partaking thankfully of the refreshments, Colin announced that he would continue on his way, unassisted.

Mamie Kelly had to drive on ahead and wait for the wayfarer at home. But as night fell, and Colin failed to arrive, the mother started to worry. Once more she got in the car and drove the 4 miles to the railroad station in Madison. There she waited until she saw Colin and Nellie rounding the bend. By this time the boy's head had dropped to the horse's neck, and she felt that nothing but Providence was keeping him aboard the horse.

When Mamie stopped the horse, the boy fell off into his mother's arms, muttering that he wasn't quite home yet, and must go on.

"Son, you've done what you said you'd do," Mamie argued. "You've ridden Nellie the 30 miles into Madison. You don't have to go any farther."

A very sleepy and stiff little boy finally yielded to this argument and instantly dropped off to sleep in the back seat of the car, while a colored boy rode the last 4 miles with the horse.

"The child is father to the man," as somebody said, and then, as when he grew up to be a man, Colin P. Kelly didn't know the meaning of the word "quit."

Teachers to Chant; Pupils To Dance in 'Boom-Time'

By Scott Hart

Post Staff Writer

A full-fledged movement, embroidered with jingles, hop-scotch poems, riddles and song, is under way here to keep the children quiet, according to the best psychological formulas, if an air raid should come.

Wilson Teachers College, which started it yesterday, hasn't named the movement, but thinks it will work—that the excitement and suspense of, say, "The Owl and the Pussy Cat," or the insistent hammering of riddles like "How many sides are there to a jug?" will quiet, compose and even engage beyond fear, infant groups under fire.

There is some informal opinion at the college, anyway, that most of the very young are likely to behave better under such a trial than are some of their elders.

Forty students have signed for the activity and teachers have volunteered to instruct them in child psychology, group contacts and the set-ups for music and dancing programs. The college students then will give the instruction to groups of children in such places as churches and community houses—wherever groups desire the service. The college volunteers will agree to spend so much time daily with the groups. And, it is reasoned, if a raid doesn't come, nothing is lost, because the children, and undoubtedly the teachers, too, will have learned something.

Should a raid occur a thumping action will ensue, one phase of which has to do with choric speaking, which makes some noise itself. This will be employed when the group's environment is too crowded for dancing and physical gamboling about; when only voices and the hands can satisfactorily be brought into play.

Then the group instructor will, with appropriate abandon and unconcern for the bombs in the next block, begin chanting:

"There's a cottage by the river where the old wives meet . . ."

The group will repeat:

"Chatter, Chatter, Chatter,
"Chatter, Chatter, Chatter."
"My lady is going to her own true man,
"Youth to youth since the world began . . ."

Unbothered as yet by courtships, the group nonetheless can succumb to the witching monotones of rhythm. And, not having been told much about the war anyway, might construe the bombings and blastings outside, or at a distance, to be nothing more than a placid if uproarious WPA sewer-building project.

Advance mimeographs to guide the instructors contain a regiment of riddles to compose the group mind including:

Students' War Posters

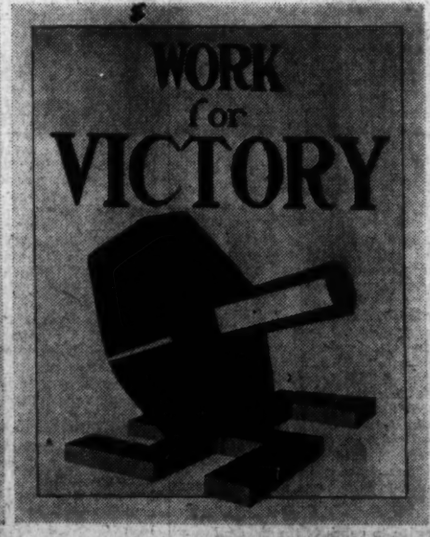
America's revulsion at the ruthless bombing of Pearl Harbor and her deep-seated determination to make certain such treachery shall never happen again, is eloquently mirrored in a collection of war posters that went on exhibition in Corcoran Art Gallery yesterday.

The posters were all drawn since December 7, 1941, by students of the Corcoran School of Art, Richard Lahey, principal, said the students, whose ages range from 16 to 60, "wanted to assist the war effort through their special abilities as artists," and they made the posters in their spare time.

Through the exhibition, which will last a week, authorities hope to attract the attention of Government officials and have some posters selected for use in the morale branch of the services.

Eugene Weisz, vice principal of the school, said he thought the experiment was especially interesting because the Corcoran School of Art maintains no poster or commercial art classes. Therefore, Weisz declared, the majority of the students have had no previous training in this type of work except their study of the fine arts.



One poster shows a happy-faced man sitting on top of the world with the words under him saying, "America is a great place to live. Let's keep it so!"

The slogan, "Remember Pearl Harbor," was used often. On one black placard the words were in red and the background showed Jap planes diving on a green island.

Other slogans were:

Don't Waste Time During the War.

Keep Cool During Air Raids.

Don't Spread False Rumors.

Awake America!

For Victory Buy Bonds.

Mother's Work

HOW about the morale of mothers right now? If children depend so largely on mothers, what can be done to keep them from feeling useless and therefore discouraged?

THE trouble with much of woman's work is that a great part of it—housework—is a lonely business. Now, of all times, we crave companionship with our own kind. Women have always found relief in keeping their hands busy and knitting and sewing and in the knowledge that this work brings comfort to the men who are fighting, or to the children who need clothing. There is a particular satisfaction in doing this, or any other work for which they and themselves suited, in groups. Through the women's voluntary organizations, the local Red Cross and Civilian Defense offices most of us can find some group work into which our particular abilities—the things we can do best—will fit. New needs will be arising all the time, such as special help in the schools, in the church, through parents' associations, or in the local community.

It cannot be said too often that now is the time of all times when people of all ages need to herd together and to work not only for their fellowmen but with them.

16-Year-Old Girl's Complaint That Family Objects To Her Attending Army Dances, Brings Answering Statement of Policy From Woman's Battalion Chief

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: On January 9 there was published in your column a letter from a 16-year-old girl, who asserted that several months ago she registered with the USO as a volunteer worker, and later was notified to report to the District Building and be enrolled as a "dancette." This she did, so she says, and thereafter attended several USO-sponsored dances for soldiers—until her parents and elder brother started raising serious objections, on the grounds of her age.

I am convinced that the girl erred in stating that she is registered with the USO. Furthermore, her age, if correctly listed, would have automatically disqualified her to attend the dances mentioned. These dances are sponsored by the Woman's Battalion, a branch of the District of Columbia Recreation Services, Inc., and are properly designated as "Woman's Battalion dances." The USO and Woman's Battalion are only remotely identified, in the sense of sharing the common purpose of providing wholesome recreation for young men serving their country. This girl probably misunderstood the identity of the organization with which she registered—if, indeed, she did register.

The Woman's Battalion requires that a girl volunteer must have passed her eighteenth birthday and must be sponsored by her pastor, her employer or some responsible citizen of the community where she resides. However, it is conceivable that a girl of 16, living at home and enjoying some freedom of social action, could represent herself as being older—when signing for such work—without anyone's having occasion to doubt her representation. This possibility is borne out in the girl's comment that "her age is never mentioned" (which is to say, questioned) by fellow participants in these recreational projects. This suggests that she does actually look older than 16.

High School girls, most of whom are not more than 18 years of age, are permitted to register with the Woman's Battalion under certain condition,—the principal consideration being their poise and sophistication, in the literal sense of the latter word. It is refreshing to note that your reply reflected the judicious policy of the Battalion, in determining which girls are essentially qualified to participate in these programs.

The Battalion has always recognized and taken into account the need to surround girls attending its dances with the same conventional precautions and general atmosphere that characterize a "private party" for young persons. That is to say, they are competently chaperoned at the dances, and also while en route and returning home. Your recognition of (a) the modern tendency to be socially more liberal with youth, and (b) the natural protective caution of men toward their womenfolk, likewise reflects the policy of the Battalion.

It is well to point out, however, that young men now in uniform come,—in more than the average number of cases,—from homes where they have mothers and sisters whom they would protect. Thus, we feel it would be unfair to the soldiers to place a stigma upon them by assuming (or implying) that girls have need to be "protected" from them. In fact, the Battalion does not acknowledge such need. The precautions it observes are rather in conformity with accepted social usage, such as traditionally prevails in civilized circles.

At present the Women's Battalion has over 6000 registrants, including girls from every State in the Union, who are in Washington to perform a service to their country comparable in value to that rendered by their brothers now in camp. Thus, the Battalion's policy makers feel that our recreational program is as beneficial to the morale of these girls as to the men in uniform. And we are exceptionally proud of the deserved prestige the Battalion now enjoys, wherever its girls have gone. Several thousands of Army men and girls have attended dances arranged by the Battalion during the past year, and to date not a single scandalous incident has been reported.

During the year we have, of course, here and there dealt with undesirable persons who sought admittance to the Battalion. But they were eliminated as soon as detected; and the girls themselves are quick to report any conduct which they feel is not up to the standard of Battalion rules. On registering, girls are given identification cards, later changed for badges. No girl is permitted to attend a dance without proper identification.

At Fort Belvoir, dances are held every Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evening, and at Fort Meade every Wednesday night. Special dances are held at Quantico, Bolling Field and other nearby posts. Previously the captains of the various Battalion companies invited girls for special dances. But at present any girl registered with the Battalion may secure reservation for special dances (as well as regular dances) simply by telephoning Battalion headquarters—EXecutive 5440, branch 28 or 29. Mrs. Eva C. Steimer, in charge of the Battalion dance program, is on duty each day.

All registrations or reservations must be made between 9 a. m. and 6 p. m. However, registrations cannot be made by telephone. Applicants must call in person at the headquarters of Recreation Services, Inc., on the third floor of the Service Men's Club No. 1, in the Gunthon Building, Pennsylvania Avenue and Ninth Street Northwest. Applicants must have reached their eighteenth birthday, and must be either employed by the Government or a local firm, or be sponsored by a reputable person. Girls failing to cancel reservations which they cannot fulfill are penalized.

I hope the foregoing letter will clarify for all your readers the Battalion's selective policy in certifying girls to participate in its work. Sincerely yours,

BATTALION COMMANDER.

Man Hotly Resents Advice Given Here

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In these days when every able-bodied man should be doing (or, at least, thinking about) something more important than writing to your column, maybe I am wasting my time in taking issue with your reply of January 15, addressed to an agitated wife who signs herself "Y. T. R." However, I am taking 15 minutes off my lunch hour to get my reaction off my chest. I am pretty "het up" over that piece of correspondence.

To begin, I don't believe any wife and mother of grown children ever writes to a professional advice-giver such as you with the expectation of following the advice given—unless, of course, you happen to say what she hopes to hear.

This wife resents the fact that during her absence "on a combined business and pleasure trip" (mostly pleasure, I bet), her husband entertained business friends and associates in their home, including two young women employes. Apparently she believes her Mr. Milquetoast didn't have this right, and went way beyond his privileges in doing anything so rash,—particularly since a little furniture was damaged and half a dozen cups and saucers were given to one of his guests. (Why, and under what conditions, she doesn't explain; probably didn't inquire into.)

Her complaint is pretty trivial, but you go her one further when you suggest that the situation calls for "a little wifely hell raising." That piece of advice is so utterly ridiculous that it incites me to send my first letter to any newspaper. Instead of advising her to do what any sensible wife would have done in the first place—namely, forget the whole thing—you add fuel to the flame by telling her to make an issue of the episode. In effect, you recommend embarrassing her husband as much as possible, giving him the good old nagging treatment, holding the incident over his head as long as possible and, in general, keeping things "stirred up."

All this might be unimportant if "Y. T. R." were one of your friends, and you had privately submitted this dastardly counsel. But with the whole thing appearing in print, and being eagerly read by wives all over the city,—if not, indeed, all over the country,—who swallow your words as oracular utterances, the results are bound to be serious.

Your advice will result in keeping "hell's fire" blazing, where the home fire should be burning, in many a household where a similar incident may have transpired. In view of the paper shortage, it seems a pity that a column and a half of newspaper space should be taken up with such drivel as this lady's letter and your reply. Very truly yours,

A. G. P.

Give Your Pup An Education

SUCH HAPPY, well-behaved pets—you'd like your own puppy to grow up that way. He will, without any great strain on your part, if you know the few simple rules of dog care.

The house-breaking process goes along without a hitch if you stick to a feeding schedule. Then take your puppy outside within five minutes to an hour after he is fed.

So you won't find your best evening slippers chewed to shreds, give your dog some toys of his own to harry—a rubber doll or bone. He'll ignore your things.

Of course, you're anxious to keep him well. A properly fed dog has much more resistance to doggish ills like distemper.

What foods are you going to give him? Meat, principally. It's the mainstay of his diet and can be safely given to a dog from the time he's 3 weeks old. Pork, though, is bad for him.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "How to Raise and Train Your Dog," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 100 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Relaxing Beauty Aids Best in Wartime

To relax between strenuous dance routines, Vera Zorina, ballet and Hollywood star, finds the nearest couch. Above, she demonstrates the quickest method for relieving fatigue. Feet are placed higher than the head, for it whips up circulation of both feet and brain.

By Carolyn Abbott

WHAT with the multitudinous wartime tasks confronting us, "beauty as usual" is a difficult job. To accomplish this, both time and money must be budgeted. Leisure primping time will come at high premiums. Yet, for the sake of morale as well as vanity, good grooming must not disappear.

First essential to beauty, as well as efficiency, is rest. Fatigue must be banished and energies renewed. An afternoon siesta in the good neighborly South American way is ideal—but not feasible for businesswomen or war workers. The quickest and most effective methods are the bath and beauty angle treatment. This beauty editor has tried both and found them most satisfactory.

When you come home completely exhausted and must dash out again looking as if you'd stepped from a band box, try the short cut methods. The beauty angle treatment has been scientifically worked out by a widely-known cosmetic firm.

Short-Cut Treatment

First cleanse face and neck thoroughly. Then apply a good mask. Two that work quickly are a strawberry mask and the Revenescence "masque." Made by different manufacturers, both whip up the circulation in less than five minutes and are easy to apply and to remove. However, if you can, let them remain on your face throughout the treatment.

Lie down on a couch or bed. Place two pillows under your hips and elevate your feet high above your head. If you don't have a headboard on your bed, you might try the wall. Keep head flat, arms relaxed at side. Try to relax completely. This position sends fresh blood to the face and in less than ten minutes you feel revived. Twenty minutes is the ideal time, but even five minutes will help. It's equal to 40 minutes of sleep. If you have an hour in which to rest and dress, apply a good tissue or nourishing cream before lying down and smooth on the mask just before bathing.

Hot Bath Most Relaxing

A hot bath is the most relaxing. However, it should be followed by a tepid one or a cold dash or shower. Many of the new bath preparations encourage relaxation to lessen fatigue. Tested by this department is a new bath line that comes in several fragrances. "The Bath Suds," created by a famous beautician, induces relaxation by speedily removing perspiration and superfluous skin oils. To soften the water there's a bath oil essence in two fragrances, "Mountain Zephyr" and "Exquisite."

One of the foamiest bubble baths to come out this season is straight from the New England woods, called "Early American Pine." It's fresh and vital, but not too fragrant. Then there's the bath balsam—"Tyrolean Pine"—which irons out nerve kinks. Besides being a foamy bubble, it is a water softener and is said to contain mild deodorant properties. It's now on sale for less than half price at a local store. For those who don't like the woodsy odors, there are the milk maid bath preparations, made of 77 per cent dehydrated milk and the floral fragrances such as "Apple Blossom." The bath should precede the lying down treatment. Allow 10 minutes for bath, 20 minutes for heels over head treatment (cut in half if necessary), 10 minutes to apply make-up and to dress.

Please Do Not Start Hoarding, Expert Advises

By Ida Jean Kain

OUR NEIGHBORHOOD stores are selling quite a bit of ant powder. Some of the panicky housewives who hurried out and stocked up on sugar have now got ants in their pantries!

Maybe this is the start of a small boom in insect powder. I saw one party, only two in the family, buying a 100-pound sack of potatoes. I suspect that the bugs will go to work on the bottom of the sack while the family goes to work on the top and that it will be a draw as to which reaches the middle first.

Just to paint the picture darker, along about the middle of winter, in the still of the night, there will be a persistent hissing sound from the vicinity of the cellar. That will be from the corroding tin cans. Or maybe they'll just blow up.

But this is really not funny. There is no need for housewives to hoard food. We will not be short on sugar, flour, fats, canned goods or anything else along the food line. Not unless housewives overstock and bring on a shortage. And if that happens, there will be trouble. It contributes to inflation. Every analysis of previous inflations reveals that panicky buying to keep from being caught short is what forces prices up.

If housewives all over the land were to buy huge stocks of food, our national economy would be so disrupted that it would bring about almost instant inflation.

The results of hoarding are so disastrous that we should avoid over-buying in any direction. I must confess that when the stocking scare was on, I provided against the future at a small store which, I had noticed, was always free from crowds. They sold me quite a lot of their old stock. Now my stockings are all full of runs. There are plenty of stockings on the market—good ones. Well, as I say, it serves me right.

We will all be better off for not buying any more today than we would normally and for taking our chances along with the other fellow.

Celebrities Galore Out for Davies' Party In Honor of Soviet Envoy and Mme. Litvinoff

More celebrities than I have seen under one roof this season were all over the place yesterday afternoon when Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Davies entertained at a 5-to-7 fete in honor of the new Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Litvinoff.

The Cabinet, the Supreme Court, the Senate and the House, with a representative number of residential Washingtonians and some famous out-of-towners made up the throng that filled the Davies' residence at 1801 Foxhall Road for almost three hours.

Judged by almost any standard, the Soviet envoy is a success in Washington, but one look at the list of guests on hand to greet him and his wife yesterday is proof enough that socially the two already have run away with the town. Political celebrities were there by the dozens. "Defense" turned out in droves, and even cave-dwelling Washingtonians were numerous in the flower-filled rooms that were crowded to the walls from shortly after 5 o'clock until time for dinner—and late dinner at that.

MME. LITVINOFF

Among those I saw were Jo Davidson, the famous sculptor, and his wife—the two completely surrounded from the moment they arrived . . . Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Odlum (she's better known as Jacqueline Cochran, the famous aviatrix; and you can expect a high-powered announcement about her new job within the next few days) . . . Mr. and Mrs. A. Lincoln Schuster (he's the New York publisher whose firm recently brought out Mr. Davies' best-seller, "Mission to Moscow") . . . Justice William O. Douglas and Justice Hugo Black, arriving with their wives, and the four hardly able to take a step without being stopped by friends on all sides . . . Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, arriving with her granddaughter, Mrs. John Lewis, who is here for an extended stay . . . Camille Chautemps, former French premier, wandering around like somebody lost, with his wife close on his heels . . . Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, a popular center of attention.

Receiving in the music room, the host and hostess greeted a line of guests that was still moving in to be greeted as late as 7 o'clock. Standing with Mr. and Mrs. Davies at the opening hour were Mme. Litvinoff, Mrs. Henry A. Wallace and Mrs. Cordell Hull. Half an hour later, the Soviet Ambassador, smartly turned out in striped trousers and a cutaway, arrived and took his place in the receiving contingent.

SOVIET ENVOY

Mrs. Davies Wears Her 'Debut Dress'

Mrs. Davies was smartly turned out in full-skirted frock of gray taffeta, set off with inserts of net in a leafy pattern—all very lovely. "My debut dress," she said with a twinkle, meaning, of course, it was the same frock she wore at the debut tea given for daughter Nedenia Hutton a few weeks ago in New York. Mme. Litvinoff had chosen a floor-length dress of purple crepe, with a narrow band of vari-colored beads adorning the fitted bodice; while both Mrs. Wallace and Mrs. Hull appeared in black frocks, the former accenting her ensemble with a sable scarf; and the latter, wearing a hat, trimmed with turquoise velvet bows to match the buttons on her costume.

A mixed bouquet of flowers stemmed from a tall silver standard in the center of the long dining room table. Assisting the hostess at pouring tea were several of her friends, including Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, Mrs. Hugo Black, Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mrs. James F. Byrnes, Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mme. Fotitch, Mrs. Frank Knox, Mrs. Harold Ickes, Mrs. Jesse Jones, Secretary Frances Perkins, Mrs. Sumner Welles, Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Mrs. George C. Marshall, Mrs. Harold Stark and Lady Lewis.

Generally assisting were Mr. Davies' daughters, Mrs. Millard Tydings, whose bouffant frock of black taffeta, trimmed in jet, was most becoming, and Mrs. Burdette Fitch, just back from her honeymoon and looking like a picture in a pencil-blue silk frock, set off with a front panel of white and red candy-striped taffeta, a matching vestee and cuffs. Also in the house party were lovely Mrs. Close Rand, whose clinging white jersey frock was accented with gold braid, and Miss Nedenia Hutton, wearing a short black frock, trimmed in crimson faille ribbon. Incidentally, she is recuperating from a broken ankle, so her good friend, Eleanor Neill, remained near her all afternoon to help her when she wanted to get through the throng.

NEDENIA HUTTON

Music on Balcony . . .

There was music on the balcony overlooking the reception hall . . . There was champagne in the library . . . There was some very special notable in sight every time you turned around . . . and there was an atmosphere of all-out gayety that I have noticed very infrequently around Washington this season.

"I thought you'd ride in on a bicycle," someone said to Leon Henderson when he and Mrs. Henderson and Mr. and Mrs. William Batt strolled in toward the end of the party . . . Senator and Mrs. "Happy" Chandler and former Gov. and Mrs. O. Max Gardner chatting merrily in the library . . . James H. R. Cromwell seemed to know everybody present, while his sister, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, not only gayly greeted her friends, but also took time out to show them her newly acquired card signifying that she's a full-fledge police captain.

Time and time again, guests returned to the music room, for another word with the popular host and his wife, or the Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Litvinoff; or Mrs. Hull, who patiently explained over and over that her husband would come along later, if he could possibly get away from the State Department. If he did get there, it was after I had gone, for the last glimpse I had of the music room, I didn't see him among those present.

MRS. HULL

All the Allied nations, the signers of the most important pact of the century, were well represented in the throng, either by their envoys or by the next man in rank . . . Vice President Henry A. Wallace, not among those present at the usual afternoon party, was on hand for well over an hour yesterday afternoon—until, in fact, he and his wife had to tear away to get home in time for the dinner they were giving last night.

In passing, incidentally, Mrs. Wallace took time out to explain to more than one friend that the difficulty she had in christening that transatlantic plane on Saturday wasn't because the champagne bottle was made of such thick glass, "but because that plane was so soft . . . There simply wasn't any way to do it, until they put up an iron pole," she went on. "That plane was just too soft."

Several Dinner Parties Accent Social Calendar

Several large dinner parties were on the calendar last night, when Percy Blair was host to a group and Mrs. Robert Low Bacon gathered in about 50 guests at her home. Among the smaller dinner gatherings last night were the party which Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Holdrege gave in their Georgetown home in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Snowden Hill; the buffet supper followed by poker at which Mrs. Sydney Cloman and her niece, Mrs. Natalie Phillips, were hostesses, and the buffet supper given by Mr. and Mrs. H. Gardiner Putnam.

The last private party—before the Navy Department moves in—at the Larz Anderson house was written into social history last night when Mr. Blair was host at a brilliant party in the fabulous home on Massachusetts Avenue that has been loaned to the Government for the duration.

Diplomats and residentials were in the majority at Mr. Blair's party, which he described as strictly informal and served buffet style. It was certainly the last time that many in Capital society will have a chance to glimpse the Joshua Reynolds portrait . . . the jade trees from Japan . . . and the Greek and Roman statuary. Within a fortnight the Navy Department will take over—leaving one wing to the Society of Cincinnati, which some years ago took over the old home of the one-time Ambassador to Japan.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Bacon was entertaining for a host of distinguished Republicans. Honor guest at the party was Gov. Dwight Griswold of Nebraska, who came East to make a speech on Saturday at the annual luncheon of the Women's National Republican Club of New York—of which Mrs. Bacon is vice chairman.

Among those who came in informally to Mr. and Mrs. H. Gardiner Putnam's buffett supper in their apartment on New Hampshire Avenue were Representative and Mrs. John Tolan, Representative and Mrs. John Anderson, Mrs. Frank H. Buck, Mr. and Mrs. James Freeman, Joseph Rankin and Mr. and Mrs. Emmett McCabe.

Visits House Speaker

Harris & Ewing

Now being widely entertained is Mrs. Tom Bolton, of Dallas, Tex., who with her husband is staying with her uncle, House Speaker Sam Rayburn, in his apartment at The Anchorage for a few days. Formerly Miss Virginia Rayburn, she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Rayburn, of Dallas

Miss Parker, Church Yearley To Be Married

Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Parker announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marion Talmage Parker, to Church Yearley, son of Mrs. McKee Barclay, of Baltimore, and the late Alexander Yearley, 3d.

Miss Parker, a former student at Columbia University, is descended from George Parker, who received a Crown grant in Monmouth County, N. J., in 1665, and from Abraham Clark, a signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Her fiance, who is the grandson of the late Melville Church, of Washington, was graduated from Johns Hopkins University. He played on the United States lacrosse team at the Olympic games in Los Angeles in 1932 and was named on the All-American lacrosse teams in 1933 and 1934. He is a member of the Tudor Stuart Club and the Varsity Club in Baltimore.

The bridegroom-elect's brother, Lieut. Dorsey Yearley, U. S. A. A. C., married Miss Janet Graham Grosset, daughter of Mrs. Fletcher W. Rockwell, of Riverside, Conn., January 3, in Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. Stapleton Gives Luncheon

Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton entertained at a luncheon at the Shoreham yesterday, having as her guest of honor Mrs. Fenton B. Turck, of New York. Covers were laid for 12.

Mrs. Turck has been visiting Mrs. John Allan Dougherty for several days.

Campaign on Paralysis Opens at White House

Wives of the Nation's most prominent men turned out for the opening of Women's Week for Infantile Paralysis, which was officially opened yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt in the Diplomatic Reception Room of the White House.

As guests drove up to the Executive Mansion shortly before 4:15 o'clock they were closely inspected and then ushered down to the Diplomatic Room, which is lined with portraits—of past dignitaries. Later tea was served for the 50 or so guests in the State Dining Room. A low mound of pink roses was arranged in the center of the table and Mrs. James Helm and Mrs. Malvina Thompson poured tea.

Mrs. Roosevelt's speech—as well as those of the other guest speakers—were broadcast over a network and shortly before time to go on the air the announcer requested that there be no applause. Following this announcement there was a dead silence broken only when the announcer said "you still have two minutes"—everyone broke into laughter.

Wearing a new diamond-shaped emblem—which will be sold for the benefit of the infantile paralysis fund—Mrs. Roosevelt broadcast to the Nation: "We Americans are engaged in a great struggle for the preservation of our country. The energy, the money, the time and the prayers of a united people stand behind the effort to preserve our country. But gigantic as that task is, requiring the sacrifice and the devotion of all Americans, we are not forgetting the essentials of public health, education, medical progress. These are the things that help make up the America we are fighting to preserve . . From now until January 26 there will be a concentration of all women's activities to raise money for the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. . . . It is not too much to hope that every woman in the country will give either time or money this week to the infantile paralysis drive."

Dr. Parran In Uniform

The First Lady then introduced the panel of speakers, including Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service—who was attired in his uniform of navy and gold.

A picturesque guest at yesterday's party was Mme. T. V. Soong, who was garbed in Chinese dress of cherry red silk and wore emerald earrings to accentuate her sleek black hair. Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, relieved her brown ensemble with a smart turquoise hat. Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of the Chief Justice, wore a perky black hat trimmed with red poppies.

In his short speech Dr. Parran warned against the dread disease—and the danger of relaxing the war against it. "In time of war," said the Surgeon General, "the war against disease must be prosecuted more vigorously. To improve the health of the people is always important. It is imperative now. We must hold the lines against preventable disease and also drive hard against those other conditions which cripple and destroy. We shall overcome the enemy from without more swiftly if we unite to conquer the diseases which are our enemy within."

Several diplomatic wives were in the group yesterday, lined up in gilt chairs listening to the broadcast. Mrs. Richard G. Casey chatted with Mrs. Eugene Meyer. Accompanied by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. John McCarthy, was Mrs. Leighton McCarthy, wife of the Canadian Minister. Mrs. Irene Caldwell, who has been active for the past few years in the infantile paralysis campaigns, was there. Seated in the front row were three Cabinet wives, Mrs. Frank Knox, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. Frank Walker and Mrs. Jesse Jones, wife of the Secretary of Commerce. Mrs. Jones wore a tobacco-brown jersey dress encrusted with jet flowers.

Mrs. Whitehurst Speaks for Clubs

Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, president of the largest women's organization in the country, the General Federation of Women's Clubs, spoke. In her talk Mrs. Whitehurst said: "I have been particularly interested this year in one way of doing something about it: The Women's Club Scrolls. These blanks have been distributed to women's clubs all over the country, to be signed by each member who contributes a quarter or more. The signed scrolls are turned into committee headquarters and sent by them to the President, as tangible offering from the clubwomen of America."

Also on the afternoon broadcast was Mrs. William Kletzer, representing the National Congress of Parents and Teachers. She said in part: "Continued research, both in treatment and in prevention, is giving all parents everywhere hope that some day in the future children will be spared the dangers of infantile paralysis and its crippling after-effects."

Other speakers included Miss Dorothy Ducas, chairman of the women's division of the committee, and Miss Nancy Merki, of Portland, Oreg., who eight years ago was told she would be a hopeless cripple—and now holds 28 swimming records. The final speaker was pretty Miss Jean White, another paralysis victim who overcame the disease to become a skating champion.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Mme. Ciechanowska, wife of the Polish Ambassador, was the guest speaker yesterday at the Sulgrave Club at the monthly luncheon meeting of the 77th Club. Mrs. Aime J. Forand introduced the envoy's wife, who spoke on "The Invasion of Poland," and Mrs. Robert Sykes presided over the meeting.

Mrs. Charles McNary, wife of the Senator from Oregon, entertained at a luncheon yesterday.

Mme. Chu, wife of the Chinese military attache, Maj. Gen. Chu Shih-ming, will be the guest of honor at a 4-to-6-o'clock party Friday afternoon at which Mrs. A. Manuel Fox will be hostess in her Georgetown home.

Mrs. Frank Morrow will entertain at luncheon on Saturday at the Shoreham Hotel.

It was during a visit with friends in South Africa that the former Miss Jordan and Mr. Nuland met. Shortly after her return to this country, Mr. Nuland followed and their wedding last October at the Plaza Hotel in New York was one of the brilliant social events of the season. The Nulands spent their honeymoon in Cuba, but with the outbreak of war with Japan they returned immediately to the United States after which Mr. Nuland was ordered by his company to Washington.

The new heir, who has been named Ralph Talbot McElvenny, jr., is also the first of seven grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. Robert McElvenny, of Seattle, to be a boy.

In recognition of the event, Mrs. McElvenny already has made the trip from the Coast to see the baby. She returned a week ago Sunday. The baby's grandparents on the other side are the late Senator Frederick Steiwer, of Oregon, and Mrs. Steiwer, of Washington. This is the McElvennys' third child, the other two being girls.

D. C. Needs Outlined To Democratic Club

The pressing need of the District in meeting its many problems is money, Commissioner Guy Mason told the Woman's National Democratic Club yesterday. Mr. Mason, speaker at the luncheon meeting of the club, discussed "Wartime Washington."

Commissioner Mason outlined the changed conditions which the defense program had imposed upon the District, pointing out that it no more than the Government had been geared to meet the sudden war expansion and attendant "headaches."

"Unlike all other cities in the country we cannot borrow money without specific authority from Congress," the Commissioner said. "We cannot change our tax structure or impose taxes not authorized by law.

May Be Necessary To Increase D. C. Taxes

"Within the limitation of the authority of Congress grants us in our taxing power, which, in the last analysis, means the amount of available revenues for 1942 and 1943, we will try to erect temporary additions to our municipal hospitals; provide more nurses; fully staff the clinics; expand the inspection of restaurants and other eating places, and rooming houses; increase sanitation; intensify and increase the fight against tuberculosis and venereal diseases; enlarge our recreational facilities, and provide necessary welfare activities.

"It may become necessary, in fact I anticipate it will become absolutely necessary, to ask Congress for authority to increase present taxes and find and tap new sources of revenue. We shall continue to try to obtain greater Federal contributions and our success in this endeavor will determine how much new taxes will be necessary. It is either more revenue and contributions or interest-bearing borrowings from the Treasury.

"Also, in conjunction with the Public Utilities Commission and the transportation utilities themselves, we will seek to build up our present wholly inadequate transportation system.

"We will continue to seek more police and firemen and more equipment for each.

"We are alive to the dangers from overcrowding and tired nerves; the lack of facilities with which to fight epidemics of disease and crime. We are preparing to meet any emergency."

Possible Air Attacks Of Vital Concern

Discussing civilian defense problems, Mr. Mason said:

"That phase of civilian defense most dramatized and which, frankly, is brought home to each and every resident, protection against enemy air attacks, has had constant attention since the establishment of OCD. From the start, Mr. Young (J. Russell Young), who, as president of the Board of Commissioners, was appointed Coordinator of Civilian Defense, has worked like a beaver, first to find out what plan was to be adopted, and, second, after the plan was developed, to get it functioning.

"He has sought funds from several sources. He was denied the money. The day after Pearl Harbor was attacked Congress authorized our borrowing one million dollars from the Treasury with which to provide adequate civilian defense.

"Out of this fund the expenses incident to the procurement of equipment for fire wardens, auxiliary police, extra bomb-fighting equipment for the regular fire and police forces, sand, sandbags, firehose, shovels, decontamination equipment, sirens and other types of air-raid warning devices, personnel for Col. Bolles, who is the active head of Civilian Defense, and the office of the chief air-raid warden. Also, out of this fund a sum was set aside for the use by Commissioner Kutz in his survey for air-raid shelters."

The luncheon was presided over by Mrs. Curtis Shears, club president. The speaker was introduced by Mrs. Garland Ferguson. Other guests at the speaker's table included Mrs. Guy Mason, wife of the Commissioner; Mrs. Charles W. Kutz, wife of Commissioner Kutz; Mrs. J. Russell Young, Mrs. Ethel Lorentz, head of the Baltimore National Democratic Club, and Mrs. Charles Brand.

Also in attendance were a group of women from the Democratic Woman's Club of Baltimore, an affiliated club of the Woman's National Democratic Club, headed by their president, Mrs. Lorentz.

Mrs. Emmett Gudger, Mrs. Charles Brand, Mrs. Frederic Halstead and Mrs. Philip Dodson were the luncheon hostesses.

Mrs. Patterson Will Attend P.-T.A. Session

Mrs. Robert Patterson, wife of the Assistant Secretary of War, and chairman of publicity for civilian defense in Georgetown, will be among the officials on the speakers platform at a Parent-Teacher meeting at Gordon Junior High School at 8 o'clock tonight.

Mrs. Patterson, a member of the Gordon Parent-Teacher Association, who devotes a great deal of her time to civilian defense work, assisted in working up the program for this meeting, which was planned to clarify regulations pertaining to school children in the event of an air raid.

An address by Col. Lemuel Bolles will be given, after which there will be a forum and questions from the audience. Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts will give a defense demonstration. Also included will be a resume of instructions received by the school from OCD, ARP, fire, police, medical and maintenance heads given by S. A. Woodward, principal of the school.

Members of Parent-Teacher Associations from all schools in the Northwest area have been invited to attend the meeting.

Announcements also will be made of plans to aid in raising funds for the Washington Grand Opera Company, and for the benefit of refugees from our island possessions.

Following luncheon, the afternoon session will be in charge of the legislative department, Mrs. Mary Wright Johnson, chairman. A member of Congress will be present to speak of legislative problems and pending bills of interest to the federation and the country at large.

The poetry section of the federation, Mrs. Minnie Frost Rands, chairman, has announced that the monthly meetings of the committee will be dispensed with "for the duration." All members are urge to assist in preparing a collection of patriotic poems especially suited to the present-day use. It is hoped that this effort will be a real contribution to the future literature of our country.

Women Voters To Continue Their Work

So that Mr. and Mrs. Average Citizen will know and understand the policies, legislation and functions of the local and national governments, the board of the District League of Women Voters, meeting yesterday, decided to continue club activities during the war.

The following resolution was adopted by the board: "That the District of Columbia League of Women Voters shall participate in the Nation-wide plan set forth by the emergency council of the National League of Women Voters at its recent meeting held in Indianapolis, Ind. As its wartime service program, the District League will intensify its activity by enlisting its membership into a concerted effort to carry pertinent information on governmental problems to the community."

The method of approach and machinery, said Mrs. Eugene Callaghan, president of the local league, who has just returned from the conference in Indianapolis, for carrying out these plans will be determined by the board of directors at the next two consecutive meetings, one of which will be held Friday.

In order to interpret policies and legislation of the local and national governments, the league will disseminate information by means of study groups, speakers' bureaus, tours, radio programs and the publicizing of broadsides, according to Mrs. Callaghan.

Before adopting its wartime program the local chapter's board examined its program carefully to see whether its work was superfluous or whether it has some definite contribution to make to the emergency. Deciding affirmatively upon the basis that the demands Government makes upon citizen understanding is even greater in wartime than in peace, the District League is even more responsible for pursuing its purpose of helping people to understand the functions and legislation of both the local and national governments.

Once a member of the league pledges a certain time to the project, she must be there and carry out her part at all times, said Mrs. Callaghan. "However, members will continue to do wartime work outside of the league."

Action to End Price Deadlock Is Due Today

An attempt to break a conference deadlock over controversial features of the price control bill was expected today, after embattled House and Senate price conferees adjourned another session yesterday without a major decision.

Efforts to compromise farm price provisions objectionable to the Administration struck a snag on the so-called Paul Brown amendment, providing that no ceiling be fixed lower than the high 1919-29 average price of farm commodities.

Apparently ready to abandon the O'Mahoney amendment making industrial wages a factor in computing parity, some of the conferees have balked at removal of the 1919-29 proviso along with it and feelers were put out on a redraft of this feature.

Compromise Plan

The so-called Paul Brown amendment, second only to the O'Mahoney amendment on the Administration's "want out" list, is identical in both House and Senate bills, making outright elimination difficult, it was said.

One of the compromise plans may seek to limit application of the amendment to basic commodities.

Survival of the Bankhead amendment, either in existing or modified form, was generally predicted, although the President has objected to its provision for a virtual Agriculture Department veto over price orders of the Administration.

110 Per Cent of Parity

One proposed modification of the Bankhead amendment would give the President power to decide when the Secretary of Agriculture overruled a price order by the administrator. Proponents of the amendment insisted the President already has this authority through his power to dismiss any officer. It was reported they would insist on retention of the amendment in its present form.

Any farm price compromise acceptable to the Administration, it was indicated, must not only eliminate the O'Mahoney amendment but retain the House 110 per cent of parity ceiling on farm prices.

Chairman Prentiss Brown, of the Senate conferees, would make no statement following yesterday's conference other than that conferees were "battling bitterly" over farm provisions.

Following the morning session he said they were still far from agreement and "both sides seem to be stiffening in their resistance."

Pa. Democrats Name 2 For House Vacancies

Holland will seek the place vacated by Joseph McArdle of the Thirty-third District when he was elected to the Pittsburgh city council.

Flood, who is director of public assistance disbursements in the State treasury department, will be a candidate for the seat formerly held by J. Harold Flannery, who was elected a judge last November.

Rome, Jan. 19 (Andi Agency to Associated Press).—Another shakeup in the Italian military high command was announced today with Gen. Mario Roatta being replaced as army chief of staff by Gen. Vittorio Ambrosio, until now commander of the Eleventh Army.

Roatta will take command of the Second Italian Army. He became chief of staff last March, stepping up from vice chief when Marshal Rodolfo Graziani resigned his posts in the high command and as commander and governor of Libya.

Ambrosio also was a former aide of Graziani, having been assigned command of an army corps under the marshal in August, 1939.

Find Carole's Wedding Ring, Gable Asks

By the Associated Press

Las Vegas, Nev., Jan. 19.—Red-eyed and silent in sadness, Clark Gable taxied alone to a mortuary today to select a casket for his actress wife, Carole Lombard.

Her body, one of 22 that were burned beyond recognition in the crash of an airliner Friday night, lay in a separate room at the funeral parlor, unviewed by the actor, who chose to remember his wife as he last saw her.

The trip to the mortuary marked the first time the grief-stricken actor ventured from his hotel room since he was informed Saturday that all aboard the plane had perished.

Later he went with friends to the foothills, where he talked with a group of men with trucks who were waiting for a party to bring out the last of the bodies.

There he made a special request—that the charred wreckage of the airliner be carefully searched for jewelry the actress was wearing.

Wedding Ring Especially

Especially was he interested in regaining a gold V-for-Victory pin and the wedding ring that symbolized their marriage.

Meanwhile, tributes from the White House, Congress, motion picture studios and movie-goers poured in for Miss Lombard.

In behalf of himself and the Nation's First Lady, President Roosevelt sent a telegram of condolence to Gable.

Bodies of the last of victims of the crash were brought to a Las Vagas mortuary tonight.

An inquest into the death of Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peters, Miss Lombard's mother, was set for late tonight.

Actress' Funeral Thursday

Funeral services for Miss Lombard and her mother.

In Hollywood, where Miss Lombard was one of the most popular actresses in the film colony, employes of all movie studios stood at attention at noon, while taps were sounded and a tribute paid to her.

A United Artists spokesman there said that the actress' last picture, "To Be or Not to Be," probably would be released next month.

Metropolitan Art To Store Treasure In Rural Fortress

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Jan. 19.—After 15 months of search, a private, modern house on a large estate in the open country 100 miles from New York, has been leased by the Metropolitan Museum of Art as a wartime repository for the most precious of its treasures, the annual report of the institution's trustees revealed today.

Irreplaceable art objects are being removed from the city to this sanctuary, where they will be under continuous guard for the duration of the war.

The report, released by William Church Osborn, president of the museum, said a staff of trusted employes will stand constant guard over the treasures.

LaGuardia Given Priorities For Civil Defense Material

Congress approved and sent to the White House yesterday legislation authorizing Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York, as Director of the Office of Civilian Defense, to spend 100 million dollars for civilian defense equipment.

Director LaGuardia has announced that priorities have been secured on all the equipment and that his office has worked out an allocation system stipulating how much is to go to which cities and areas.

Procurement will be made by the Army, in cooperation with which all equipment plans have been worked out, he said. An "educational order" of 50,000 gas masks is included.

Board Approves Staggered Hours

Support of the Board of Trade yesterday was thrown behind proposals of Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer to "stagger" the working hours of employes in private business.

The executive committee of the trade group unanimously indorsed the plan in a special resolution citing present rush-hour congestion on downtown streets. The committee report read:

"The Board of Trade requests private business establishments in the downtown area to stagger their hours of employment in order that the large number of people coming into and leaving the downtown area shall be more evenly distributed over a longer period of time and authorizes its special committee to seek the cooperation of employers in effecting a staggered-hour system based on studies now being made by the Department of Vehicles and Traffic."

Facilities of the Board of Trade are now being used by Van Duzer's office in the city-wide study of "origin and destination" of private workers. Some 70 "checkers" are at work and recommendations will be submitted to the Commissioners within a short time.

Forest Hills Meets Tonight

Raid Siren's Mighty Blast Is Just Test

Siren sounds in Washington yesterday came from the Bureau of Standards and not from sirens installed to warn District residents of approaching air raids.

As an aid to communities who are having trouble deciding just what siren is a good one, bureau technicians are conducting various tests for the national Office of Civilian Defense.

They gave an audition to a compressed air horn yesterday and will try out still another device—a steam-operated siren—next Monday.

Citizens living near Dupont Circle heard the sounds from the bureau, located on Connecticut Avenue at Upton Street Northwest. In comparison with other siren tests held in the city, this was good—probably the best yet.

Contract Bridge

This question concerns your play of today's hand. You are sitting South at a four-spade contract and West opens the diamond queen. How would you handle the deal so as to take ten tricks? The solution appears below.

Today's Hand

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♠ | 2 ◇ | 3 ♠ | Pass |
| 4 ♠ | Pass | Pass | Pass |

Opening lead: Q ◇.

The Solution

South wins his four-spade contract by making a safety play which guards against an adverse ruff. He has a loser in hearts and in trumps and so must avoid giving up more than one diamond trick. He realizes that East may easily have a singleton diamond, since West bid the suit, and that West probably holds the trump ace with which to gain the lead and give his partner a diamond ruff.

If he falls to the temptation of taking the first lead with the diamond ace in his hand, he will be set. Upon leading trumps West will win and play the diamond jack, declarer will have to cover with dummy's king or let the jack hold the trick. If he covers, East will trump and declarer still will have a diamond loser which he cannot get rid of. To avoid this misfortune all South has to do is to take the first trick in the dummy. Now, when West gains the lead with the trump ace, a diamond lead cannot hurt as declarer can play small from both hands. East must play before declarer; if East trumps, South plays small, retaining the diamond ace. If East chooses to discard, South takes with the ace, draws trumps and the contract is assured. With this plan declarer makes four spades easily, losing only a trump, a diamond and a heart.

Senate Committee Unanimously For Christenberry

The Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday unanimously recommended Senate confirmation of Herbert W. Christenberry to be Federal district attorney of New Orleans.

The committee voted after a subcommittee reported that charges made against Christenberry were "based upon conclusions and inferences rather than upon fact."

A report filed by Subcommittee Chairman McFarland (Democrat), of Arizona, with the full Judiciary Committee unanimously recommended Senate confirmation of Christenberry, brother of Earle Christenberry, former secretary to the late Senator Huey P. Long

Samuel Ballard, president of the Louisiana Association for Clean Government, and James J. Morrison, the association's attorney, had accused Christenberry of possessing "neither the moral qualifications nor the character" requisite to the office, the subcommittee reported.

Thousands Take TOMA Tablets

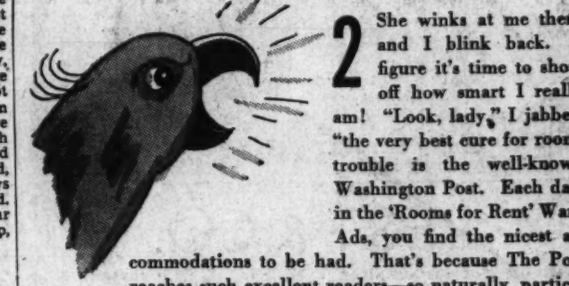
1 You get to know plenty hanging around a Pet Shop. Kinda makes you mad—people asking you that silly "Polly Wanna Cracker?" all the time. So when this sweet thing comes in and hands me the old familiar business, I just keep my beak buttoned! She looks disappointed at first, but then she smiles. "I don't blame you for sulking, pretty Polly," she says. "You live in such a tiny room, just like I do! That often makes me feel sulky, too."



2 She winks at me then, and I blink back. I figure it's time to show off how smart I really am! "Look, lady," I jabber, "the very best cure for room-trouble is the well-known Washington Post. Each day, in the 'Rooms for Rent' Want Ads, you find the nicest accommodations to be had. That's because The Post reaches such excellent readers—so naturally, particular people advertise in The Post. Do I make myself clear?"

3 The lady doesn't answer—she just laughs and dances out the store. Few days later she's back, with a box of real crackers this time. "Polly," she cries, "I'm moving—to a big, bright room! In a lovely neighborhood, too! Found it just like you said—through the Want Ads in The Post. And d'you know what else? You're coming to live with me!" But my eyes are on that package she's holding. I let out a squawk . . . "Polly wanna CRACKER!"

Edina, Mo., Jan. 19 (AP).—An advertising man's duties take him many places but James Beal of this town believes he is one of the first to find a client in jail. Beal received a card asking him to come to the county jail. A prisoner handed him this advertisement: "Notice: Those people to whom I owe accounts please call at the jail and I will pay same."

Her husband, also made ill by the discovery, recovered.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Senate Approves Retirement Bill

The Senate yesterday passed by a 42 to 24 vote the House-approved Ramspeck-Mead liberalized retirement bill which will affect nearly every one of Uncle Sam's 1,600,000 civilian employes. Several minor amendments were added by the Senate but Chairman Robert Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee indicated last night that he will attempt to get the House to concur in the changes rather than send the bill to conference. The House passed the bill unanimously several months ago.

The bill would raise employe contributions to the retirement fund from 3½ to 5 per cent. The employe deductions would start on July 1 under an amendment offered by Senator George. Several hundred thousand Federal employes would be brought under the civil service retirement system by the measure. The system now covers only 900,000 civilian employes.

Members of Congress are eligible for pensions under the bill and it was this provision that set off Senate debate. Senator Byrd offered an amendment that would have compelled those Congressmen who elect to come under the system to pay into the fund a sum that would include regular retirement deductions from the time they entered Congress. The amendment was defeated 34 to 28. Senator Mead, who handled the bill, put through an amendment that would require members of Congress to come in under the retirement system during the 1942 calendar year. Newly elected members would have to elect to take advantage of the system within six months.

Must Retire at 70

Senator McKellar of Tennessee, obtained approval of an amendment that would give legislative employes already under the system a chance to drop out within six months. Temporary Capitol employes would be exempted under another amendment sponsored by Senator George. The bill would make 70 the compulsory retirement age for Federal workers, and abolish the 62 and 65 age groups. An employe would be permitted to retire at 60 after 30 years' service, or at 62 after 15 years' duty. It would be possible under the bill for an employe to retire at 55 after 30 years of work. The bill would give the Government the option of retiring an employe but the employe could take his case to the Civil Service Commission if he objected to being retired at 60 or 62. By making larger contributions, the employes would draw larger annuities.

Wayne Coy, the soft-spoken and able Presidential aide, is being considered as deputy to Donald Nelson. He's now the President's liaison with the Office of Emergency Management. Nelson will announce his reorganization tomorrow. The abolition of OPM is anticipated but the agency will simply be given another name and there won't be any mass firing.

Charles Stern, of Federal Works, has been appointed personnel director of USHA . . . Friends are booming Ed Pritchard for general counsel of the new War Labor Board . . . William S. Knudsen moved out of the Social Security Board building yesterday to the new War Department building where he assumed the rank of lieutenant general. Incidentally, he now goes on the Federal payroll at the salary for that rank. He had been serving without pay

Federal Security Agency yesterday placed its 50,000 employes on a 44-hour work week, effective next Monday. The order means an hour more of work each day for employes at NYA, CCC, Social Security Board, Public Health Service, Office of Education, Food and Drug Administration, the administrator's staffs at St. Elizabeths and Freedmen's Hospital, Howard University, and Columbia Institution for the Deaf. National Resources Planning Board went on a 44-hour week yesterday and the Interior Department will start a longer work week on Monday.

District Red Cross Hails Best Year Since Last War

REWARD FOR SERVICE—Dramatic feature of the annual meeting yesterday of the District Red Cross in the Pan American Building was the presentation of a special certificate of appreciation to Mrs. R. C. Mackay, for her work as vice chairman of volunteer special services. The certificate, which has been awarded only three other times in the history of the chapter, was presented by Brig. Gen. F. R. Keefer

Committee chairmen, yesterday hailed the past year as "the most successful since World War I" for the District Red Cross. The chairmen made reports at the annual meeting of the organization held in the Pan-American Building.

Total memberships during the year were 190,435, Edgar Morris, chairman of the Roll Call committee, reported. These contributed $246,320.27.

Almost a million and a half volunteer hours were given to the Red Cross here during 1941, it was reported. This represented an increase of almost 100 per cent over last year.

During the past year 1,670,570 war relief surgical dressings for military use were produced. Garments sewn totaled 140,012, knitted garments completed 38,369.

More than a 100 per cent increase in the number of nurses' aides during 1941 was reported.

Facts and figures included those that the 144 members of the Motor Corps drove 65,449 miles during the year and that 20,337 meals were served by 182 Canteen Corps workers.

Gen. F. R. Keefer, chairman of the chapter, presided at the meeting. A certificate of appreciation for services rendered as first vice chairman of the volunteer special services was presented to Mrs. R. C. Mackay. This certificate has been presented only four times previously in the history of the District chapter.

Bruce Baird, war-fund chairman, made a report on progress of the campaign. Yesterday the District fund reached a total of $164,615.03 on its goal of $750,000. Large company gifts included Woodward & Lothrop, $3,000. Among large individual gifts was that of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Everett, $130.

The national war fund yesterday reached a total of $30,698,679. Oregon yesterday became the second State to exceed its State-wide quota. Montana was the first.

Among the large national donors were the Carnegie Corporation, of New York, $75,000, and the Andrew W. Mellon Educational and Charitable Trust, of Pittsburgh, $50,000.

New members of the District chapter's executive board elected at the meeting yesterday follow:

Britisher Praises Red Cross Work

Sir Vivian Gabriel, of the British Air Commission, praised the courage and valuable service rendered by the American Red Cross during the Battle of France, particularly through the Dunkirk evacuation, in a talk given last night.

He spoke at the Red Cross public speakers' dinner held in the Y. W. C. A., 614 E Street Northwest. Other speakers were Novelist Temple Bailey and Daniel Hoan, associate director of civilian defense.

Sir Gabriel, a member of the governing board of St. John's Hospital, in Jerusalem, said to have been founded by the Crusaders in the year 1000 A. D., gave a brief history of that institution.

Miss Bailey revealed that the heroine of a new book she is now working on will be connected with the Red Cross in the story.

Bill Rushed To Provide More Homes

District Officials Have Many Plans But Little Money To Relieve Shortage

With all sorts of plans before them, but only a limited amount of money available, officials yesterday were continuing their study of Washington's acute housing situation.

Representative Lanham (Democrat), of Texas, said he was consulting with defense housing representatives with a view to preparing a bill to cover the local plight.

"Something's got to be done," he declared, announcing brief hearings of "explanation as to need" would be held on any bill drawn up and then the measure would be acted upon as speedily as possible.

Plans for 4500 homes for lower-salaried workers in Washington for defense work were delayed when local Government employes here were excluded from enjoying benefits of the new Lanham Act by conferees unwilling to classify them eligible to defense housing benefits.

Recommended by Palmer

The houses were recommended for Washington by Defense Housing Coordinator Charles F. Palmer in December. At the same time, he announced Defense Homes Corporation would build 7500 efficiency apartments and private builders were expected to erect 10,000 living units by July 1.

It was said at Palmer's office yesterday that local builders were moving ahead with their part of the program, and that additional sites are being secured for the apartments, largest group of which will be at Friendship, former estate of Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean.

In the meantime the Palmer office is studying plans for a 32-million-dollar "rehabilitation" program that would make 15,000 living units available in the Southwest part of the city more quickly than they could be built new. The office also has in the "discussion stage" a proposal that a large recreation center be set up for the benefit of approximately 1000 clerical workers clearing through the Civil Service Commission here each week.

Such a center would be only a temporary dwelling place for newcomers, serving to house them only until they could be fed into the regular Federal army—now housed amid overcrowded and often substandard conditions.

Modernization Planned

The study of rehabilitation for Southwest Washington was made under the direction of Arthur Goodwillie, director of Coservation Service of the Home Owner's Loan Corporation, in cooperation with other agencies interested in housing.

Reconstruction of the area would call for modernization of structurally sound houses on the perimeter of nine Southwest blocks and the construction of three-story apartments on the interior, where alley dwellings now exist.

It is argued that this rehabilitation could be done much more quickly than a similiar number of new houses could be built—and that it would have the additional advantage of providing living accomodations within walking distance of the Government offices.

"Any plan that suggests we can get 15,000 additional living units quickly would receive careful consideration," it was said at Palmer's office yesterday.

Industrial Safety Plan Lacks Funds

Legislation Signed Last October 14 Still Inoperative, A.F.L. Council Told

Industrial accident prevention legislation approved by the President last October 14 has remained dormant since then because of the failure of Congress to appropriate funds for the employment of personnel, Fred S. Walker, member of the D. C. Minimum Wage Board and editor of the Trades Unionist, stated last night at a meeting of the Central Labor Union.

The Minimum Wage Board was entrusted with the job of administering the safety legislation which went through Congress without opposition.

A request by the District Commissioners for $7800 to cover expenses up to June 30 was turned down in the House Appropriations Committee, Walker said. Efforts to have a deficiency appropriation approved are being made by labor leaders with the approval of the Commissioner, he said.

As evidence of the need for an active board, Walker pointed out that total accidents during 1941 were 32,873, compared with 31,265 in 1940. Fatalities decreased from 76 to 57 during the same period, he said.

Pledges toward the Central Labor Union's drive to raise money for civilian defense work exceeded $14,000 yesterday as new donations were reported at the meeting. Among the new donations are: A day's pay from 420 members of the Iron Workers, or about $7000; a dollar each from 750 members of the Bakery Salesmen's Union, and a similar contribution from the Beer and Soda Drivers' Union, and $2000 from the Meat Cutters.

A resolution calling for the appointment of a member of the A. F. of L. to the vacant post of chief clerk of the Labor Department was adopted.

Officers elected at the last meeting of the C. L. U. were installed.

Newcomers' Need of Social Facilities Told

The importance of developing social and recreational facilities here adequate to accommodate the thousands of new war workers in the Capital was brought home to members of the Monday Evening Club last night. Representatives of several social welfare organizations presented reports at a meeting in the Y. W. C. A.

Dr. Daniel R. Seckinger, assistant director of the department of public health, said medical authorities are presently engaged in developing adequate preventive measures to preclude the recurrence of an influenza epidemic such as occurred shortly after the last World War. Regulations effecting the control of infected employes of eating establishments and providing for regular investigations of boarding houses have already been inaugurated.

Helen Shuford, supervisor of tenant selection, Alley Dwelling Authority, reported that the large influx of people to the District of Columbia, because of the defense program has accentuated the housing problem in metropolitan Washington, which will be alleviated but not solved by the completion of between 22,000 and 23,000 additional dwellings by June 30, 1942.

David Auld Hugo Wolter, of the District of Columbia Department of Sanitary Engineering and Recreational Service under Civilian Defense, respectively, informed the club that thus far the results of the efforts of their organizations to promote social and health benefits to the residents of the District have been satisfactory.

Sibyl Baker, director of Community Centers, reviewed the history of a bill presently with the District Committee of the Senate to coordinate Washington social and recreational facilities and administrations and stated that in the event the Senate committee held hearings on the bill the executive of the club would appear in support of the bill.

Busch, Serkin Give Recital Extraordinary

By Ray C. B. Brown

Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation tenders a concert to the Friends of Music in the Library of Congress on Monday night in Coolidge Auditorium. Artists: Adolf Busch, violin, and Rudolf Serkin, piano. Program: Sonata in E flat major for violin and piano (Mozart), Violin Partita in D minor (Bach), Variations and Fugue on a Theme by Handel in B flat major, Op. 24 (Brahms), Fantasia in C major for violin and piano, Op. 159 (Schubert).

Those incomparable ensemble artists, Adolf Busch and Rudolf Serkin, gave a deeply satisfying recital last evening in Coolidge Auditorium in the Library of Congress for the friends of music, who were the guests of the Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation. Those who have been so fortunate as to secure tickets for the repetition of the program tonight may look forward with certainty to enjoyment.

BROWN

Most noteworthy in the playing of the pair is the spontaneity of their readings in which there is no trace of premeditation, and unanimity which is so close that they seldom glance at each other for cues in attack.

Had not their individual appearances given such pleasure, one might regret that they played only two works together. But in the E flat major sonata of Mozart and Schubert's seldom-heard fantasia in C major they were so extraordinary that the recollection of their performance will be long in fading. The Mozart sonata sparkled in the allegro movements with a pristine dewiness, and sang in the andante with a melting tenderness. In the Schubert fantasia it was hard to say which was the more delightthemes in the meditative passages ful—the eloquence of the lovely or the impetuosity of the imaginative flights.

As soloists, the artists aroused as much enthusiasm as they did in partnership. Mr. Busch was at the height of his tonal persuasiveness and his technical adroitness in the Bach partita in D Minor.

Mr. Serkin gave the Handel variations of Brahms a magnificence which I have heard from no other pianist. He may have erred somewhat in hardness of tone, but one forgave him that for the splendor of the performance.

Pro-Musica Quartet Presented at Phillips

At the twilight hour yesterday, the Washington Chamber Music Society presented the Pro-Musica Quartet in Phillips Memorial Gallery which was filled as usual with patrons of the Candlelight Concerts. There were no novelties in the program which confined itself to tried and true music. Messrs. Owen Lusak, Jeno Sevely, Theoror Podnos and William Brennand played Mendelssohn's E flat major quartet with the popular Canzonetta. Their reading was well coordinated in fiber and spirited in feeling.

Reino Luoma was the guest artist at the piano.

Chevy Chase Forum Probes District's Ills

Impossibility of placing responsibility was blamed last night at the Chevy Chase Community Forum as the real monkey wrench in the machinery of a Washington "tragically lacking" in proper facilities for health, transportation, housing, recreation and education.

A half dozen speakers and an audience of 150 persons gave voice to a whole oceanful of ills in the District, ranging from Government girls crying in their rooms to the need of a subway system.

Chief speaker was Representative John J. Sparkman of Alabama, member of the Tolan Committee, currently considering civilian morale. Members of the Forum panel were Gregory Hankin, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission; Lawson Cantrell, assistant superintendent of District schools; Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health officer; Mrs. Harold Stone, of the District League of Women Voters, and Conrad Van Hyning, director of the District Board of Public Welfare. The meeting was at the Chevy Chase Women's Club.

The whole tenor of Representative Sparkman's talk was that Washington was just about the opposite of what it should be as "the nerve center of the Allied nations"—a model city. Especially shameful, he contended, was the condition of Government workers.

He told of an Alabama Government worker here coming to him and telling him of "crying my eyes out" because of unhappiness.

"How in the world," the Congressman said, "these boys and girls come here and work on $1260, $1440 and even more and ever hope to keep body and soul together I cannot understand."

Van Hyning said the "real difficulty" for the District's various ills is that "we can't place responsibility for these things."

Mrs. Stone suggested the merging of Senate and House District Committees and equipping the single committee with technicians as one means of scissoring off some of the red tape.

Regarding the transportation item, Hankin said the transit companies now have sufficient facilities if hours of workers using the facilities were staggered more.

Replying to a question, the Utilities Commission chief said the subway idea was out of the question now because of a shortage of "men and materials."

Concerning health, Ruhland declared the possibility that "a few thousand" more hospital beds may be required. Best bet for a Government worker on the health item, he said, is to take out group hospitalization.

Then Cantrell warned against curtailing educational opportunity because of the war.

Robert Bondy, administrator of services to the armed forces for the American Red Cross, presided. Charles Taft, assistant director of of defense, health and welfare service of the Federal Security Agency, was to have been main speaker, but was ill, so the Alabaman filled in.

C.I.O. Council Urges Millions For Housing

In resolutions which pointed to the severity of the present housing shortage which faces Government employes coming to the District, the C. I. O. District Industrial Union Council last night urged Congress to give the Alley Dwelling Authority and the Alexandria Housing Authority a total of 90 million dollars to build additional homes for war workers.

The C. I. O. central body also urged members of its affiliated unions to make space available in their homes for Government workers to help relieve the shortage. Another resolution criticized the Public Works Administration for failing to provide funds for Government worker homes under the Lanham Act.

A report of the body's civilian defense committee told members to volunteer for civilian defense posts, rather than "sit back and say civilian defense is inefficient."

Henry Rhine, national representative of the United Federal Workers of America, was elected president of the I. U. C., succeeding Cecil Owen, who resigned several months ago.

Other officers who were elected last night are: Vice presidents, Sidney R. Katz, U. F. W. A.; George Rycraw, U. F. W. A.; James Harris, Cafeteria Workers; Jack Zucker, Shoe Workers; secretary, Roy Patterson, U. F. W. A.; treasurer, Ruth Carroll, cafeteria workers; financial secretary, Elizabeth Hale, U. F. W. A.; executive board, Jack Mink ,Cafeteria; Craig Vincent, Hale, U. F. W. A.; executive board, Jack Mink, Cafeteria; Craig Vincent, U. F. W. A.; Charles Duke, Technicians; Hudson Wells, Construction Workers; Morton Friedman, U. F. W. A.; Sadie Sokolove, Office Workers; Gertrude Evans, U. F. W. A.; Milton Lowenthal, U. F. W. A., and William Hinckley, U. F. W. A.; trustees, Oliver Palmer, Cafeteria Workers; William Rossmore, U. F. W. A.; Thomas Rice, Shoe Workers.

Examiners Set to Inquire Into Rent Complaints

Examinations of complaints under the District's new Rent Control Act will begin today.

Two of three scheduled examiners—J. Warren Wilson, graduate of the Washington College of Law, and Leonard S. Hayes, Negro attorney—were sworn in yesterday at the District Building.

A third examiner appointed by the Commissioners withdrew when he found, he said, the job required full instead of part time. He is Henry M. Fowler, an attorney here since 1915.

"I would have been glad to help out on a part-time basis," Fowler declared, "but I didn't feel I should leave my private law practice."

Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell said he hoped to fill the vacant post sometime this week. The examiners will each receive $3800 a year. Some 500 complaint petitions await inspection, Cogswell declared.

The examiners will not act as a board, but will investigate specific cases assigned them.

Women's Patriotic Conference Pledges Full War Support

Full support of war industries and an attack on subversive teachings in schools, along with a plea for preservation of principles in the Bill of Rights, were contained in resolutions adopted yesterday at the concluding session of the Women's Patriotic Conference at the Mayflower Hotel.

Enlargement of committees already established to combat subversive activities was advocated and greater cooperation between labor and management was urged. The conference, by resolution, condemned the idea of union now, under which the United States would link itself into a federation of democracies.

Rear Admiral R. R. Waesche, commandant of the United States Coast Guard, called for sacrifices on the home front during an address at the morning session yesterday.

"With the example of the Navy men at Pearl Harbor and similar examples of Army and Marine Corps men in the islands of the Pacific, it should not be difficult for us to sacrifice here at home. Every woman of the country can play a part in the national defense effort," he stated. "A great many can do their part in office and factory, in civilian defense and other related activities. But by far the majority of the women of this country can perform a real service in the home. They can give cheerful encouragement to their men folk in whatever defense roll engaged; they can give immeasurable service by encouraging unity, stifling criticism, discouraging gossip and rumor and using every economy in household expenditures," said Admiral Wesche.

Andrew J. Biemiller, of the Labor Division, OPM, told the delegates that "to meet our pressing labor needs we are going to dig deeper into the population. We must train many more women workers to step into the jobs left open by men called into military service. We must give every loyal American an opportunity to work at war production without regard to race, creed, color or national origin."

Midnight Birthday Bills Will Be Big Bargains

Celebrations Attracting Many Top Stars; "H. H. Pulham, Esq." Wins a Nice Award; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

IN ADDITION to the galaxy of visiting screen stars—to bat out a new one in phraseology—the "command performance" of "Watch on the Rhine," at the National Sunday night, and the other corollaries of the multiple-event, the midnight performances of the combined Capitol and Earle stage bills on Friday night, January 30, will be no mean feature of the President's Diamond Jubilee birthday celebrations.

HEDY LAMARR

This double-barreled bill, to be presented in both houses in line with usual custom, will bring before the Earle and Capitol audiences such stellar entertainers as Sammy Kaye and His Swing and Sway Orchestra, Cass Daley, Dean Murphy, Carmen Amaya and the Hollywood Blondes, presumably fortified by the presence of both the Roxyettes and the Rhythm Rockets.

Most important in this connection is the announcement by Carter Barron and John J. Payette, cochairmen of the entertainment committee, that only the respective seating capacities of the Earle and Capitol will be sold. Audience comfort, fire regulations and other pertinent considerations have placed a strict taboo on the sale of standing room. Which is as it should be.

Tickets for these midnight performances, at which all of the visiting Hollywood stars will appear, will be sold for the flat price of $1.65 per seat. If you remember past birthday celebrations, no reminder will be necessary of how smart it will be to be first in line when they go on sale.

And then there's that major birthday ball to be held the same night in Uline's Arena, where the "Ice-Capades of 1942" are currently cutting their capers. For this event, Johnny Long and His Orchestra will furnish the terpsichorean tunes. Mr. Long is the fork-handed violinist and conductor who recently led his band to a great popular success on the stage of the Earle Theater. Most of the lads in this youthful organization, which modestly heralds itself as the "miracle band of the year," have been with their maestro ever since their collegiate days at Duke University. Vocalists Helen Young and Bob Houston also will be along the night of the thirtieth.

The USO Shows Receive a Boost

Father Gilbert V. Hartke, mentor of the Speech and Drama Department of Catholic University, having completed the first semester of his fellowship course at Northwestern University, has returned to Washington to assume new and multiplied duties. With Leo Brady and Walter Kerr to share the burden of the C. U. dramatic productions, Father Hartke will launch immediately into the complex task of supervising the National Capital Catholic Community Center's contributions to the entertainment of the trainees throughout the country, under the auspices of the United Service Organization. He will work in collaboration with 100 or so affiliated clubs eager to produce their own shows from membership talent. Distinguished associates already have been enlisted in the work. The drama desks are to meet one of them—a brilliant Hollywood personality—at luncheon today in the Carlton.

To those who perceived qualities of unusual merit in "H. M. Pulham, Esq.," recently shown at the Capitol, it should be of interest that this M.-G.-M. production costarring Robert Young, Hedy Lamarr and Ruth Hussey, received the Boxoffice Blue Ribbon Award for December as "the best picture of the month for the whole family." This award is made by the National Screen Council, a representative organization spanning the country, through Boxoffice Magazine.

Kathryn Grayson, singing star of the picture, has been prevented by illness from participating in the two-day civic celebration in Lynchburg, Va., attending the world premiere of "The Vanishing Virginian," on Thursday and Friday of this week. Ann Rutherford will appear in person as representative of the entire M-G-M cast at the gala goings-on, which have taken on the dimensions of one of the greatest film premieres ever staged in these parts.

No Time for Fooling!

Hollywood, Jan. 19.

That small group of aliens headed by Eddie Ashley, Richard Day, Charles Bennett, and others, who called on Col. Stillwell, of the State Guard, to make them a speech the other night, had better watch their step. Col. Stillwell made himself very clear when he said, "Gentlemen, there's a war on. There's only one thing to do, and that is serve. This is no time for fooling."

MYRNA LOY

If they're really patriotic and want to serve, their own countries will take them in. And the fact that an Englishman isn't subject to call here doesn't prevent him from enlisting, nor the American public from calling him a slacker if he doesn't. There's much jealousy between the various English groups and their allies. Before they go into battle they'd better quit fighting each other and stick together, or they'll hang themselves separately.

The Sautrday Night Club was a grand get-together. Everybody had a whale of a good time, and the fact that money spent went to Bundles for Bluejackets added zest to it. Myrna Loy's short haircut makes her look like a kid. Loretta Young was a knockout in a white lace gown that could have been a ballet costume, and over that, an ermine tippet trimmed with tails at the bottom. Mrs. Fred MacMurray is still one of the smartest gals in town. I don't blame Darryl Zanuck for wearing his uniform—it's certainly becoming. Ann Warner, Marlene Dietrich, Margaret Lindsay and Irene Dunne were all in black. Dietrich's hair was piled high on her head—but several of the girls looked as though they had combed their hair with an egg-beater.

Now that Anne Sheridan and George Brent are finally married, I wonder if his manager, Minna Wallis, will crack out and give them a dinner!

The home where Wendy Barrie was born in the Philippines was bombed the first week of the war.

The latest rumor as to why we called off our Academy Award banquet is this: Hollywood's afraid "Citizen Kane" might get the award for best picture, and our top boys don't want to be caught giving him a dinner as well as the award. Now you tell one.

Now that Dottie Lamour has made such a success of her tour back East selling bonds, Bill Boyd would like to do the same thing. Dottie goes into the factories and talks to the workers; she's not asking the big shots to buy, because they'll buy anyhow. And Bill wants to take a month off and go through munitions plants and high schools. He maintains everybody can spare a quarter a week for stamps.

At Paramount they have five young contract players, like Susan Hayward, Eddie Bracken, etc., stationed at various spots every lunch hour. In a few weeks they've sold $200,000 worth of bonds and stamps, and are still going strong. Just shows what you can do if you have willing workers.

I like Ken Murray's line: "Contribute your dollars for defense and keep 'em flying. Contribute your dimes to the infantile paralysis fund and keep 'em walking. America is a country where we try to cure cripples instead of making them."

Now Comes Out of 'Retirement'

ISOBEL ELSOM,

recently seen on the screen in "Ladies in Retirement," the Gilbert Miller-Lester Cowan film version of the stage hit, who this week appears at the National Theater in the foremost feminine role in Marc Connelly's new play of "The Flowers of Virtue," given its first performance on any stage last night. Miss Elsom has played the whole range of stage parts since her debut in the chorus of a London musical comedy while still in her 'teens

"The Flowers of Virtue" lamentably burst into something less than full bloom in the National Theater last night.

In fashioning the "comedy" to serve as his contribution to the dramatic discussion of the warring democratic and Nazi ideologies and mark his return to active authorship for the first time since his epochal play of "The Green Pastures," Marc Connelly has touched only the fringes of his topic's possibilities and even so, except by vaguest implication, clarifies his point only in the last and best of three wordy and phlegmatic acts. The point seems to be that the miracle of the perseverance of virtue still persists in a world in which the powers of evil seem for the moment dominant.

This is the ethesis expounded in most of the contemporary dramas dealing with some aspect or other of the present world conflict. It is a premise that demands thoughtful, penetrating and forceful exposition through the conflict of strong characters, vibrant situations and the exercise of the theater's sturdiest tools for the implementing of deep emotions, the dynamics of vigorous action and passionate convictions. Upon the occasion of its first performance on any stage, "The Flowers of Virtue" seemed to lack all of these essential qualities. A spacious and timely theme is shriveled to the dwarfed dimensions of the pygmy characters the author has selected as the living symbols of a struggle that has encircled the globe.

Social Unrest in Miniature

The scene of the play is the garden of Carlotta Garcia's home in the little Mexican village of Las Flores de la Virtud, which translates literally into the title. Senora Garcia is an eccentric American authoress, beneficiary of an inexplicable renown, whose husband is a native Narcissus, her houseboy a not-too-sly Nazi agent, and an habitual caller a microscopic political "power" motivating his ambitions with a 1-candlepower intelligence. The arch enemy of this counterfeit Gen. Porfirio Orijas is Trinidad Perez, the village electrical engineer, into whose nature has been poured the sum total of native rectitude.

Into this bizarre household come Sheldon Williams, the young American archeologist, Grover Bemis, self-made millionaire from Dayton, Ohio; Mrs. Bemis and their daughter, Nancy. By strangely transparent devices they manage to rescue Trinidad from the murderous purposes of Gen. Orijas' mock trial in the third act—the allegory's only period of sustained interest—and pave the way for the final curtain's apostrophe to the imperishable glories of the honor and dignity of man.

Mr. Gomez Steals the "Honors"

With the exception of the role of Perez, played with quiet and impressive simplicity by S. Thomas Gomez, there is not a part in the play worthy of the talents of the performer who assumes it. The role of Bemis is only the shadow of the skeleton of such a character as might do Frank Craven justice. Isobel Elsom, so admirable in "Ladies in Retirement," last evening was elusively incomprehensible, as Carlotta, in such of her scenes as could be heard as far as the fourth row. Peter Beauvais did well with the idealistic assignment of Paco Perez and Virginia Lederer and Jess Barker made a little something of the American romantic interest, but there is not a role in the piece into which an honest actor can honestly set his teeth. This would not be to belittle Vladimir Sokoloff and Leon Belasco, as the conniving pro-Nazi Orijas and oily Ezequiel. They performed valiantly in parts that didn't deserve it.

Donald Oenslager's single setting, with its fine atmospheric touches, is the most conspicuous asset of a play which perhaps was intended to be a comedy, as the program describes it. If so, Mr. Connelly unfortunately neglected to make it comic, except in the most unintentional sense.

SPORTS DEPARTMENT: Johnston reminisced of the day when he saw Mike McTigue, 24 hours after Paul Berlenbach had deposed him as light-heavyweight champion of the world. "I'd like to manage you," Johnston consoled the former champ—who accompanied Jimmy to his office, and signed the necessary documents, without even examining them . . . McTigue then placed a $1000 bill on Jimmy's desk. "And if you want me to help you out any more," Mike told the startled Johnston, "just say the word."

Betty Wells Handed 'Tortilla Flat' Role

Betty Wells, attractive young Dallas, Tex., singer and dancer, discovered in "Meet the People," makes her first screen appearance playing the eye-filling, but well-protected Cesca Torrelli in "Tortilla Flat," starring Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr and John Garfield.

Bette and Olivia Get Sniffle Tribute

Eddie Blatt, dialogue director on Warner Bros.' "In This Our Life," broke up an important scene between Bette Davis and Olivia de Havilland, but the girls didn't mind. In fact, they were flattered.

The scene, in which Olivia comes to see Bette, who is grief-stricken at the death of her husband, was so touchingly played that one sad, silent interval was interrupted by sniffles from the dialogue director.

Instead of being peeved, Bette and Olivia looked at each other, then at Eddie, and thanked him profusely.

"I guess I just forgot myself," Blatt explained. "I'm sorry."

A. A. U. Expands Competitive Sports Card

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Emancipation for tongue-tied tennis audiences is at hand. Down in Florida, Gardner Mulloy, coach of the University of Miami tennis team, has announced that it will be all right to boo or cheer the action as it strikes the spectator's mood. It is safe to say that the U. S. L. T. A. officials have swooned in a body.

POVICH

Anybody who has ever been drilled by the sharp, angry glance of Bill Tilden knows the high crime of being articulate at a tennis match, beyond the polite handclap when a point is scored. Tennis fans have been taking it lying down for years because somewhere in the game's distant past somebody decreed it was de trop for the audience to give tongue to any enthusiasm it might feel. Nobody ever bothered to explain why, and silence around the court has become such a hide-bound convention that only the hulking peasant would raise his voice in a boo.

Golf, too, has grown up in the polite atmosphere of suppressed tongues. A whisper that carries more than six feet, while a brute of a guy is swinging a club, is not considered cricket at all. Like in tennis, the history of the silence laws of golf is uncertain, but down through the generations they have been rigidly observed. Overtones, while a guy is taking a swing, are a heinous offense and even the undertones put a golf gallery's breeding under suspicion.

No Superior Need of Concentration

Just why the sound and the fury should be deemed so ungenteel for golf and tennis, and completely correct in baseball, football and boxing is uncertain, too. On the score that the golfer and tennist may have a superior need of concentration, it can't be justified by anybody. Certainly no golfer or tennis player has any greater need of concentration than a fighter who can get his head knocked off if his mind wanders from the task at hand. The worst that can happen to a golfer or tennist upset by the gallery noise is one missed shot.

Why does Don Budge or Byron Nelson require any more concentration than, for example, Joe DiMaggio, who may be facing one of Bob Feller's fast balls? Yet, with the cheers or boos, as the case may be, of thousands of fans ringing in his ears, we have seen DiMaggio up at the plate with the bases full, completely undisturbed, and he always appeared to us to be the most composed man in the park. At least, he has acted like it.

Golf and tennis never did seem to have much right to demand silence from the galleries unless they were willing to admit that their players couldn't take it. It is completely unnatural for Americans to stand by, or sit, and give no tongue to their emotions during competition. Whatever respect tennis' and golf's laws of silence has commanded always struck us as due, chiefly, to the blind, dumb faith of golf and tennis spectators in the correctness of what the brass hats of the two games told them was correct.

Football thrives on the noise in the stands and quarterbacks are disturbed only when the yelling is such that his players can't hear the signals. Otherwise, there is never any complaint. The defensive team is never bothered, seemingly, no matter how loud the commotion in the stands. Like boxers, football and baseball players have a talent for ignoring the crowd noise or if they don't have that talent it doesn't seem to matter.

Babe Ruth Liked Crowd's Noise

Our idea of fun would be to turn loose a Brooklyn baseball crowd on a Tilden tennis match and watch the players' reaction when they hear the familiar "Ya bum, ya!" Our suspicion is that they'd make nervous wrecks of any set of tennis or golf players; either that, or make men of 'em. We rather think that golf and tennis players, if the brass hats of their games would, all of a sudden, get off the golden silence standard, would learn to like the sound and fury.

Babe Ruth used to say that he liked to play before big and noisy crowds; in fact, he preferred it. "It always makes for a better ball game," the Babe used to say. "A lot of noise puts the players on their toes and makes 'em work harder. The worst ball games are played before small crowds, but when you've got a park filled, you see a better game. You've rarely seen a bad world's series game, and the noise and the crowd is one of the reasons."

The horse race people are smart about crowd noise. They know they can't control it, and make no effort to do so. They don't like the booing when a favorite gets a bad ride, and their regulations call for the jockeys to take it without retort. To boo is the great American prerogative, they have learned, and any jockey who so much as makes reply to an irate bettor is fined and suspended. Good, healthy booing might even result in bettering the brand of tennis and golf we now see.

On the Line

RAY ROBINSON, THE NEXT CHAMPION

New York, Jan. 19.—Not since Joe Louis came along to spread-eagle the heavyweight division before he was its champion has a nonchampion stood out as clearly in a division as does Ray Robinson, the spidery, kinky-pompadoured welterweight.

CONSIDINE

Just as it was a foregone conclusion that Louis would win the title the first time he got a crack at it, so it is certain that Robinson will ascend formally to the title once owned by the Mickey Walkers, Jack Brittons and Ted Kid Lewises just as soon as he can get Sailor Red Cochrane in the same ring with him.

The night comes next month at Madison Square Garden for the benefit of the fight against infantile paralysis. Unbeaten and untied in 27 professional fights—and still not yet 21—Robinson will be at least a 1-to-3 shot.

All resemblance to Louis stops after we say that each thoroughly henpecked the champion ahead of him by turning in much more outstanding performances. Jim Braddock, champion when Louis came up, had lost 19 fights and one other had been declared no contest. Cochrane has lost 28 fights. There is also a slight parallel between Louis and Robinson in the fact that each had to come up the hard way—as kids—without much aid from the old man.

But there the parallels end. Joe is Southern; Robinson is a Harlemite. Joe is sultry, sleepy dynamite; Robinson is a ball of fire. Joe shuffles in; Robinson bounds like a kangaroo. Joe somehow succeeds in looking almost apologetic while jarring out an opponent's brains; Robinson is proud, vain and resentful in a way that reminds one hauntingly of the early Ty Cobb.

He's a Champion's Champion

But what a simply swell fighter Robinson is! They don't make 'em like Robinson very often. He's worth waiting a long time to see. He's brilliantly fast with his limbs, can hit a man twice with the same fist with so little time wasted between one punch and the next that you think of an air-hose hammer. He can bound in and out of range as no one has been able to do since Kid Chocolate—throwing a blizzard of punches and somehow managing self-consciously to smooth out his stiff, weird pompadour every few punches. He can disembowel an opponent with a long, fast uppercut that rips up across a man's vitals, and he can hit you with a straight right that has shocking speed and power.

We never saw a harder punch by a little (145-pound) man than the one he hung on Fritzie Zivic's jaw in the ninth round at the Garden the other night. Fritzie went down like a dead man, his face pressed so hard against the resin on the canvas that he got up with a face that looked like a hunk of breaded raw meat.

Cocky, arrogant Ray Robinson, who used to be a Harlem bootblack, and wound up before he was 21 years old walking along Lenox Avenue with $2000 spending money in his handsomely tailored clothes, is going to be around for a long time. We don't think he can miss becoming one of the more formidable welterweight champions.

A golf pro writes: "Why do you sportswriters keep hammering away at Sam Snead when he blows up in a tournament? When are you going to realize that he's just a good—but vastly overrated—player? If he had Paul Runyan's tee shots you never would have heard of him. He doesn't compare as an iron shot player with Nelson or Picard and can't putt nearly as well as a half a dozen headline golfers. About the only department in which he really excells is driving. He is the best man off the tee since Jones, but that's all. You fellows should stop viewing it as an upset when he blows up. He'll be doing that the rest of his golfing days."

P. S.—Jean Bertholet, who made a name for himself as a distance runner, has gained seven pounds in the Nazi concentration camp into which he was flung a year and a half ago. But this is no boost for the "scof" in concentration camps. It just so happens that Jean is the chef . . . And speaking of boxers, did you know that George Washington held the bare-knuckle championship of the crown colony of Virginia in 1748?

Association To Cooperate With Camps

41 District Groups In Service Work; Regular Tournament List Is Approved

By the United Press

New York, Jan. 19.—Guided by the principle that the young men of the country not yet in the armed services must be kept physically fit, the Amateur Athletic Union, ruling body of the Nation's nonprofessional athletes, today announced plans for extensive broadening of its competitive program in addition to a full-scale schedule of regular championship tournaments.

The A. A. U., according to Secretary-Treasurer Daniel J. Ferris, will have 41 district associations working with various camps, forts and naval stations. With their instructions as a foundation, the amateur union will provide enough athletic events to train and entertain members of all camps.

Post-Work Events

"Another of our chief hopes," Ferris said, "is that we can make more facilities available for after-work activities in civilian life, too, so as to bring more nonmilitary citizens into sports fields and thus make them better fitted for future call to the services."

Ferris said the A. A. U. will work along much the same lines that were laid down in the last war because the making of champions serves a good purpose both morally and physically.

"Here's how we figure it," Ferris said. "Every youngster tries to emulate a champion and his mode of living. All those colored kids just worship Joe Louis and want to go out and be clean-cut champion boxers like him.

"That also holds true for Leslie MacMitchell, N. Y. U.'s star miler. Every boy that ever wanted to be a runner wants to run like him.

"As a direct result, we have a lot of embryonic young athletes who may never make the grade as champions but who will be as physically fit as competition can make them. That's why we're going to accelerate our program as much as possible."

Stars in Service

The loss of several top-ranking stars to the services doesn't necessarily mean that the standard of A. A. U. competition will be lowered, Ferris said. During the last war several star athletes continued their training in service and had the opportunity to participate in most A. A. U. events as representatives of their particular service unit.

Because of that arrangement, the national track and field championships in 1918 were fought out between the Great Lakes Naval Training Station and the Pelham Bay Naval Training Station. Practically all the men who competed were members of the service and some winners had never shown any ability until invited to compete by the A. A. U.

An executive A. A. U. meeting has been scheduled for February and unless the Government advocates any changes, will hold the following events:

March 15-21, men's basketball at Denver, Colo.; 22-26, women's basketball, Missouri.
April 10-17, senior wrestling, New Orleans; 13-14-17, senior wrestling, Boston; 24, senior weight-lifting, Cincinnati.
June 26-27, junior and senior track and field, Dallas, Tex.
July 4, women's track and field, Ocean City, N. J.
August 6-9, men's senior outdoor swimming, Seattle, Wash.; 14-16, women's senior outdoor swimming, Neenah, Wis.
September 19-21, senior horseshoe pitching, Louisville.

President Calmly Tells Stockholders the Club Lost Another $100,000

By Whitney Martin

Wide World Sports Columnist

New York, Jan. 19.—The next time we have to go to a dentist we're going by proxy, and we have the guy all picked out to go in our place. He is Don Barnes, president of the St. Louis Browns, a fellow practically immune to pain.

He gave a convincing demonstration of this amazing gift recently when, grinning broadly and slipping in a wisecrack now and then to show it didn't hurt a bit, he stood before the stockholders of the Browns and announced the club was another $100,000 in the red as a result of the 1941 season and was starting 1942 flat broke.

Inasmuch as a goodly portion of that $100,000 came out of Mr. Barnes' jeans, his immunity to pain is apparent.

Wilson Meets Western Five; Riders vs. Tech

It will be a perfect job of matching today when Western and Wilson, two prime contenders for the interhigh basketball crown, come to grips in the feature half of a double bill at Roosevelt gym. The opener, at 3:30, pits the host school's five against Tech.

Both teams in the headliner, oddly enough, have a two-point loss to Roosevelt on their records. In addition their won-lost marks are approximately the same, Western having taken five of its seven starts and Wilson five of its six.

To the victor will go undisputed possession of fourth place in the public school standings. At present the clubs are deadlocked with one victory and one loss apiece.

In its portion of activities Roosevelt is expected to have little difficulty downing the Trainers, thus tying Central from the league lead.

With a total of eight games on the local scholastic schedule, the outstanding outside contest today sends Bethesda-Chevy Chase's representatives to Garrett Park for a meeting with Georgetown Prep.

Two Heavyweights Scheduled to Fight at Arena Tonight; New Yorker Is Favored

By Tony Neri

After a 24-hour delay, caused by the late arrival of Claudio Villar, one of the main event principals, Promoter Joe Turner will unveil his first boxing show of the season tonight at the W Street arena.

In the 10-round headliner, Villar, the Spanish heavyweight who was detained by immigration officials in Miami upon his arrival from Cuba, will engage Bob Pastor, former football star of New York University.

With Pastor an overwhelming favorite because of his outstanding record the past year in the heavyweight ranks, Villar will find himself in for a busy evening. Eight times Pastor has returned the winner with nary a defeat.

His victory over Booker Beckwith, the highly rated Gary, Ind., fighter, and wins over Al Delaney, Canadian champion, and Turkey Thompson, bruising West Coast heavyweight, have catapulted Paster back into the picture for another shot at Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis.

Villar, due to arrive today by plane from Miami, will be making his second showing in a Washington ring. Last summer his fight with Lee Savold on the Eddie Blunt-Bill Poland card saved Promoter Turner's fistic endeavor from being a complete washout.

Although knocked out in the sixth round, Villar exhibited enough punching power and intestinal forti-

Harvard Official Denies Freshmen Will Be Eligible

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 19.—Bill Bingham, director of athletics at Harvard, tonight disclaimed a report in the undergraduate Harvard Crimson that freshmen will be eligible for varsity sports next autumn.

The undergraduate daily paper today printed a statement, attributed to Bingham, that Harvard would also advance the beginning of football practice.

Labeling the Crimson story as incorrect, Bingham stated that he had submitted several recommendations to the university, but that these suggestions could not be disclosed unless, and until, they were accepted.

Harvard, Yale and Princeton have a tripartite agreement which governs their intercollegiate athletic relations. Any suggestions acceptable to Harvard would, presumably, also be submitted to the other two universities for concurring approval.

Cox told President Bill Benswanger that he had already taken his first physical examination and had been put in class 1-A.

Badgers, Illini, Gophers and Buckeyes Win

By the Associated Press

Madison, Wis., Jan. 19.—Wisconsin's defending Big Ten basketball champions gained a .500 rating in conference play tonight with a decisive 58-to-36 victory over Michigan. The win was the third in a row for the Badgers, who lost their first three conference starts.

Illinois Is Victor

Champaign, Ill., Jan. 19—Illinois retained its lead in the Big Ten basketball race tonight by defeating Iowa, 42 to 35, in a wild and wooly game in which the lead changed hands seven times. It was the fifth straight victory for the Illini.

Minnesota Coasts

Chicago, Jan. 19.—Minnesota handed Chicago its sixth consecutive defeat in the Big Ten basketball race tonight, 52 to 28. It was the fifth victory in six games for the Gophers, who held to second place in the race.

Ohio State Wins

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 19.—A vastly improved Ohio State University cage team, sparked by Guard Max Gecowetz' 16 points, won its second straight Western Conference game tonight, beating Northwestern, 51 to 41, before a crowd of 3291 in the Coliseum here.

The Buckeyes started the same line-up which last Saturday enabled them to pull the Iowa game out of the fire in the second half. Grabbing a 4-0 lead with a rush, Ohio State never was headed, although tied twice in the first half which ended, 29 to 20.

Krause Is Appointed Assistant Irish Coach

Pounds Learns How to Save Tires

Pieces of Haight:

Miami, Fla.

Dear Boss:

They tell me that the following classified ad ran in the Shelby (N. C.) Daily Star: "Lady with good car desires to meet gentleman with four good tires. Object—Miami."

I haven't heard how this lady made out but I have run into several instances of teamwork on tires since I arrived in these so-called tropics. Two Washington couples matched to see which family car would be used for a trip here. Four fellows from Baltimore motored down, each of the vacationists furnishing one tire.

HAIGHT

Perhaps the best scheme, if you have the money, is to follow the plan used by a pair of newlyweds from Brunswick, Md. They came down on the train and then rented a car here for $25 a week, furnishing their own gas and oil.

Although Miami has good bus service to almost all points, the long hauls make it expensive for taxi riders and those used to their own cars at home are almost lost without them. But I guess we will all have to get seasoned to that soon.

In the week since I left Washington, I have seen the early effects of tire rationing all along the line. Gas station attendants in North Carolina were complaining about the light trade. So were the roadside eating places of all kinds. The same went for tourist camps and hotels.

I have traveled over No. 1 Highway toward Miami many times in mid-January, but never have I seen the traffic as sparce as this time. Rail and plane traffic into Miami is normal or a shade above, from what I have learned, but those methods of travel always ran second and third to John Q. Motorist hereabouts.

Speaking of tires Boss, we were having our weekly after-the-races get-together the other day in the Hialeah publicity office and, as usual, the scribes were rubbing

D. C. Group Urges Bonds For Prizes

Relief Societies, Red Cross to Benefit; Recommend Pros Be Paid for Service

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The District Women's Golf Association canceled the Corby and Duffer's Cup championships yesterday but otherwise recommended full speed ahead on the 1942 tournament program, including defense stamps and bonds for prizes and a portion of all tournament entry fees for the Army and Navy Relief and Red Cross.

Mrs. Walter L. Weible, president, met with the officers and executive committee at Kenwood Country Club and except for slight opposition to a full team match schedule the theme was to carry on as in 1941.

The executive committee, composed of the women's golf chairmen of each of the 13 member clubs, carried important legislation back to the clubs to be discussed at meetings next week and in turn relayed back to another District meeting the first week in February. It all seems fairly certain of passing the various boards, however.

Defense bonds and stamps for prizes.

To start the team match schedule in June and play through the summer in view of a caddy shortage before school is out, plus moving all tournaments back to a later start.

To pay the home club professionals at least $10 a tournament as in buying defense stamps they will be unable to patronize the pro shops for prizes.

To dnoate either a $25 of $50 defense bond as a gift of the association to the winning professional in the pro-lady tournament, the money to come out of the treasury.

To discard the budget books and charge of flat rate of $1 entry fee for each tournament. Last year the budget books sold for $4 and included 13 tournaments. This year's schedule will total 11.

Mrs. Weible said an effort will be made to schedule the tournaments, as far as possible, at courses accessible to street car and bus lines. Particularly the District Championship, which lasts five days. Washington, Kenwood, Chevy Chase and Columbia fall in this category, among the 18-hole layouts eligible for District tournaments.

The Corby Cup and Duffer's Cup, for the Elizabeth Harris trophies, are unsponsored events of the association. The Corby Cup is a Class A affair held annually at Columbia for the cup donated by Mrs. W. S. Corby and the Duffer's competition is for the Class B golfers, both held over the 18-hole route.

Mrs. J. P. Brantley and Mrs. F. W. Evans, both of Kenwood, were appointed respective A and B Class handicap chairmen by Mrs. Weible. Mrs. Carter Magruder, who came to Army and Navy last year from the Pacific Northwest and assisted Mrs. P. W. Rutledge as tournament chairman last year was appointed tournament chairman at Mrs. Rutledge's request as the latter preferred to fill in as assistant. Mrs. Theodore Peyser, Woodmont, was appointed team captain.

The intercity matches were left to the discretion of the inter-city team players. Mrs. Myron Davy has offered her services as team captain.

Mrs. Weible, wife of an Army officer and starting her second year as president of the association,

Miss Goshen Drives to Victory in Feature Race at Hialeah

James Brings $13.60-Shot HomebyHead

British Warm Takes SecondMoney;Votum Runs Third; Favored Harry Heinman Fails

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 19.—Basil James, one of the jockeys who packed his tack and came here when racing on the West Coast was canceled, continued to fare well in featured competition at this point when he drove the Cedar Farm's gray filly, Miss Goshen, to victory in the Brickell Purse here today. The 6½-furlong event for smart platers was the best offering on the card which opened the first full week of a thriving meeting.

James drove the daughter of Kiev through along the inner rail as the eight-horse field swung into the stretch. His mount barely headed J. M. Malone's British Warm to pay $13.60 for $2. Mrs. H. G. Good's Votum was beaten another head while earning third money in the nerve-tingling finish. The sloppy track was no handicap to the winner, which was timed in 1:19 1/5.

The talent was rudely treated by Harry Heiman, favorite in the headliner. The brown colt raced head-and-head with Halcyon Boy for about a half-mile, then both faded out of the picture as British Warm and Miss Goshen took up the issue. Votum also joined the battle for command through the stretch. Miss Goshen kept her head in front while splashing along next to the rail. Harry Heiman brought up the rear.

Extra! Dempsey, Firpo Signed On Uline Card

"What would you think," Promoter Goldie Ahearn announced breathlessly yesterday, "if I told you I got Dempsey and Firpo signed for Uline's Arena next Monday night?"

"I have got the former heavyweight boxing champeen, Dempsey, signed to referee my six-man rassling royalty," Ahearn said, "and I also have got Firpo to rassle!"

Further investigation proved that the Firpo in this sense will be 212-pound Carlos Firpo, a cousin of Luis Angel Firpo, who once knocked Dempsey into the laps of newspapermen in a championship bout before a million-dollar gate.

Florida's West Coast Net Tourney Is Delayed

St. Petersburg, Fla., Jan. 19 (AP).—Originally scheduled to open tomorrow, the Florida West Coast tennis championships have been postponed for one week because of midterm examinations at the University of Miami, which would keep at least four East Coast players from competing this week.

Francisco Segura, the South American champion, and George Lyttleton-Rogers, the giant Irish titleholder, are among the entries in the men's division and Pauline Betz, national indoor champion, heads the women's draw.

Hoya Frosh Turn Back 'Y' Five, 50-33

Behind a 19-point scoring barrage by Center Kostecka, Georgetown University's freshman cagers turned back the Y. M. C. A. five, 50-33, yesterday at the latter court.

Kostecka's opponent in the pivot position, Byrne, also turned in a fine point performance with 16, but the "Y" team was unable to cope with a yearling club which divided scoring between seven players.

Texas Cowboy Meets Steele In Mat Prelim

One of the big drawing cards down in Texas wrestling rings, Cowboy Luttrell, has been booked for a special 30-minute bout on Thursday night's show at Turner's Arena featuring Ray Steele, Glendale, Calif., Adonis and Pat Fraley, the Fighting Irishman.

Luttrell, who once socked Jack Dempsey so vigorously when the Manassa Mauler was refereeing a bout that he almost broke his jaw, will be pitted against Fred (Legs) Grobmier, of Des Moines, Iowa.

Another seasoned campaigner, Hans Kampfer, one-time holder of the Graeco-Roman European championship, will face Stanley Pinto, the Bohemian Bomber, in a 30-minute battle.

Abie Coleman returns after several months absence to engage Rough Rudy Dusek in the semi-windup.

Villar Arrives Today to Meet Favored Pastor

tude to warrant a return fight here. In that encounter the Spaniard suffered a badly cut nose in the opening round that hampered him.

Since the Savold fracas, Villar gained a ten-round decision over Buddy Scott—and a new trainer in the person of Harry (The Horse) Raskin, who was Scott's former trainer.

Raskin, so he says, was so impressed with Villar's improvement since that Savold licking that when asked if he'd handle the Sapniard, quickly grabbed the opportunity and accompanied Villar back to Cuba, where he seconded him in two fights.

Promoter Turner has promised Villar another crack at Savold, who is under contract to him. Bill Daley, manager of Savold, has agreed to have his fighter meet tonight's winner. Pastor will be unable to accept the issue, as he has two fights lined up with Gus Lesnevich, the light-heavyweight king, and Lem Franklin, sensational colored heavyweight.

Villar's fighting Savold again is contingent on his winning tonight. If he loses, but makes a respectable showing, Turner will probably give him the return shot.

Pastor is meeting Lesnevich February 6 in New York and Franklin February 6 in Cleveland. Savold is fighting Neville Beach, young Southern heavyweight, next Monday night at Turner's Arena.

With a brisk advance sale reported for tonight's scrap, the arena may be filled to capacity by ringtime. Tickets are still available, though, and may be purchased at Turner's, Fourteenth and W Streets Northwest. Prices range from $1.20 general admission to $3.60 ringside.

Buddy Holmes, Washington, vs. Eddie Finazzo, Baltimore, six rounds.

Roy Dunne, Washington, vs. Nick Manfredo, Baltimore, six rounds.

Jackie Cranford vs. Kid Stribling, both of Washington, four rounds.

The first bout is scheduled for 8:30 p. m.

Goetz Seeks To Protect Own Fight

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 19.—Ben Goetz, Cleveland boxing promoter, today sought to stop Mike Jacobs' scheduled fight between Bob Pastor and Gus Lesnevich—on the grounds that Pastor and his manager, J. J. Johnston, had agreed not to engage in an important match before Pastor meets Lem Franklin in Cleveland on February 24.

In the name of the National Sports Enterprises, Inc., Goetz filed suit in Federal Court asking that Pastor be enjoined from engaging the light-heavyweight champion here this month. Pastor was signed for the Lesnevich fight several days ago as a substitute for Lou Nova, who injured himself while training.

Agreed to Bury Hatchet

It is understood that before signing Pastor, Jacobs and Johnston agreed to call off the suits they have lodged against each other. Jacobs was suing Johnston for money advanced to him over a long period of time; Johnston was suing Jacobs for Jacobs' alleged failure to go through with a Louis-Simon return match after having contracted to do so.

According to Goetz's complaint, Pastor and Johnston signed articles with him on December 23 for the February 24 fight, and agreed not to fight for three weeks before February 17.

"In engaging in such a boxing exhibition with said Gus Lesnevich," a portion of the filed document read, "the said Bob Pastor will subject himself to extraordinary physical hazards which may prevent his engaging in the boxing exhibition." This was believed to be the first boost Lesnevich ever received, as a puncher.

Jacobs Switches Date

Anticipating trouble from Cleveland, Jacobs today switched the date of the scheduled Pastor-Lesnevich match from February 6 to January 30. However, three weeks before February 17 is January 27.

At first this switch didn't satisfy the Cleveland promoter. After further conferences a spokesman for Jacobs announced tonight that Goetz has consented to the Pastor-Lesnevich set-to on January 30 and everything is set for the Cleveland bout on the 24th.

River Vale Skeeters Meet Eagles Tonight

Jersey Team Out of Cellar After Recent Streak; Jack McKinnon Now Coaching

No longer an Eastern Hockey League doormat since moving unbeaten in 9 of their last 12 games, the River Vale (N. J.) Skeeters return to Riverside Stadium tonight for an 8:30 o'clock game with the Washington Eagles.

Prior to December 26 the Skeeters had won only two games, and were trailing hopelessly in the race. Since then they have won six games, tied three and lost three.

The Skeeters have clicked of recent weeks despite two changes in coaches and the loss of two players. Tonight newlywed Jack McKinnon, who directed the River Vale Club last season, but started the current campaign with Johnstown, will be back at the helm.

The Skeeters released Coach Jess Spring recently and appointed Charley Good, a player, to replace him. Good resigned shortly afterward, necessitating bringing back McKinnon. Defenseman Red Storey and two other River Vale players quit the squad in protest when Spring was released, but the other two reconsidered and joined the squad.

One of McKinnon's first moves upon returning as coach was to bring back Ken Terry, 6-foot, 2-inch, 195-pound defenseman from last season, to replace Storey.

The reversal of form shown by the Skeeters dates back to the acquisition of Defenseman Don Durno from the Eagles who were oversupplied by players.

Fitzpatrick compiled three points in his fifty-fifth inning to take a 49-to-43 lead and needed just one more point to win. But Chamaco stepped to the table for his fifty-fifth frame and calmly clicked off a high run of seven.

Fitzpatrick now has been beaten four times in seven matches.

Art Rubin, of Brooklyn, won his second victory in the other afternoon match with a 50-to-44 margin over Earle Lookabaugh, of Chicago, in 59 innigns. Rubin led at the intermission, 25 to 5, but Lookabaugh narrowed the gap in the second part of the match. Each had a high run of five.

Lions' Trudel Third Scorer In Close Race

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 19.—Bill Summerhill, of Springfield, who took possession of the American Hockey League's top scoring post last week, was forced to share it today with Ad DeMarco, Providence star.

While Summerhill, an outstanding reason why his club is setting the pace in the loop's Eastern division, found the net twice and set up a play to bring his total to 38 points, DeMarco scored a goal and figured in three assists.

Lou Trudel, of Washington, who led the league until displaced by Summerhill, picked up a couple of goals and trails with 36 points.

Ed Bush, of Providence, whose 34 points—4 last week—places him well up among the top scorers, was sent off the ice for two more minutes to bring his total to exactly an hour spent in the penalty box.

The leading scorers:

Nino Bongiovanni, Ex-Redleg, Burned In Magnesum Fire

By the Associated Press

Los Altos, Calif., Jan. 19.—Nino Bongiovanni, 30, an outfielder with the Cincinnati Reds in the World Series two years ago, and now a member of the Syracuse ball club, was burned severely on the hands in a magnesium fire at the Permanente Magnesium plant here today. He suffered lesser burns on his face and legs.

Bongiovanni, a fireman at the plant, and Marvin Peters, 40, a laborer, were working near a condenser when a small amount of magnesium was ignited. Peters suffered serious burns on both hands, face and neck.

The fire was extinguished before any property damage resulted, plant officials said.

Louise Suggs Florida Victor

Punta Gorda, Fla., Jan. 19 (AP).—Louise Suggs, of Lithia Springs, Ga., was again in full command of her game today as she eliminated Georgia Tainter, of Fargo, N. Dak., 5 and 4, in the semifinals of the annual Punta Gorda Women's Golf Tournament.

Miss Suggs, the defending title-holder, meets Ellamae Williams, of Chicago, three times Illinois State champion, in the 36-hole finals tomorrow.

Miss Williams eliminated Mary Jayne Garman, of Sarasota, 3 and 2, in a match that provided the day's best golf.

Miss Tainter, far off the form she displayed in earlier rounds, failed to win a hole in the first nine and was five down at the turn.

Zone Defense Occupies Hoya Court Squad

Coach Elmer Ripley invited his Georgetown basketball squad back to work yesterday following a three-day layoff after the G. W. game and scrimmaged them against the zone defense as employed by tomorrow night's foe, the University of Maryland.

Ripley watched the Terps click in the last few minutes to beat Washington College last Friday and he was impressed with the play of Ernie Travis, the State's leading scorer with an average of 15 points per game.

The Hoyas will be host to the Terps at 8:45 tomorrow night at Riverside Stadium following a freshman battle at 7:15.

The Terps have won three of eight games this year and Ripley indicated the suburban rivals, with the zone defense and fast-break offense, would be no soft touch.

George Washington will invade West Point tomorrow afternoon to meet the unbeaten Cadets in a game which will break the 2-2 tie existing in the modern series. Catholic University will continue its Mason-Dixon Conference schedule against favored Western Maryland at Westminster tomorrow night.

Ripley gave the Hoyas a deserved layoff after four tough games in eight days. "We've been losing men on fouls so early we've had a hard time getting going in most of the games," Rip said last night. "Bill Bornheimer played only 16 minutes against G. W. and he's been trying so hard he has been fouling."

Kenny Engles has been getting the ball off the backboard in approved fashion, but he and Charley Schmidli have been getting tough luck in the scoring column. Georgetown will be favored over Maryland regardless, but the Terp sophs will bear watching.

New York, Jan. 19 (AP).—Freddy Archer, 138, Newark, easily defeated Terry Young, 135, New York, in eight fast rounds in the main event at St. Nicholas Palace tonight.

Starting with the second round Archer used a methodical two-fisted trip-hammer attack to the body. The fight was devoid of knockdowns.

Night Ball Program Awaits Landis' Poll

Owners Withholding Action Until Commission Comes Through With Comprehensive Set-up

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 19.—The major leagues are going to have more night games this year, but they are still in the dark, in a manner speaking, on the details.

There was a general belief today that the whole problem now is up to Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis, who is wintering in Florida, and that he might shortly poll the 16 big league clubs by mail to arrive at a program.

Fourteen night games at home for each of the 11 clubs having lighted parks seems probable, but President Roosevelt's suggestion last Friday that more night games be played has opened up some additional possibilities.

One of the most novel of these is the desire of the Boston Red Sox, who have no lights, to play twilight games. Owner Tom Yawkey is vacationing at his hunting preserve in South Carolina and nothing definite has been done, but other executives of the Red Sox have been giving the mater consideration.

Braves' Plans Unknown

Whether the Boston Braves would follow suit is not known and might be a determining factor in the eventual decision by the Sox. Besides the two Boston clubs, the only others not having lights are the New York Yankees, Detroit Tigers and Chicago Cubs.

Under the present rules of the major leagues, all clubs are limited to seven home games at night. At the last two winter meetings, the American League has sought to have this limit raised and been overruled by Landis siding with the National League.

The latter outfit retreated Saturday at what was to have been a secret meeting, agreeing to an increase which the members hoped would not exceed 14 games.

Some of the American League clubs want 14 as the minimum, instead of the maximum, and a few of the magnates foresee that Landis may permit a form of local option during the war.

Griff Favors 20 or 25 Games

Clark Griffith, president of the Washington club, said today he favored playing 20 or 25 night games during the three summer months and thought each club should have the right to decide for itself on the basis of local conditions. He would like to play during the day on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays and at night through the week.

Donald Barnes, president of the St. Louis Browns, whose financial straits were one of the impelling reasons for other American League clubs lining up for night ball, said he wanted to play as many as possible at night. Both Washington and St. Louis have long, hot summers.

The National League club owners agreed unanimously to fight against any options and to make whatever limit was reached cover all clubs. On the basis of 14 games for each team, two-club cities like St. Louis and Philadelphia would have 28 night games and the total nocturnal contests for both leagues would be 154 games.

The major leagues will meet here February 2, but Landis does not plan to attend. As a result he is expected to sound out the stand of the various clubs by mail, perhaps next week, in order to establish baseball's policy before the meetings next month.

James Mundie Named Racing Pigeon Head

James F. Mundie, a veteran fancier, has been elected president of the Capital City Racing Pigeon Club, it was announced last night by W. R. Pennington, the organization's new secretary-treasurer. Other officers for the year are Ollie Brown, vice president, and Harvey Morris, second vice president.

Selection of new officers was made at a recent club meeting, at which a schedule was decided upon and members voted to convert the body's cash balance into United States defense bonds.

Ten old bird and eight young bird races were planned, with the former featured. These will start with a 110-mile race from Cumberland, Md., on April 26 and be concluded with a 500-mile event from Nappanee, Ind., on June 27.

Tops on the young bird slate will be the 300-mile race from Akron, Ohio, which will wind up the season. It will also start with a race from Cumberland, Md., on September 6.

Gehringer, Playing Career Over, Signs as Tiger Coach

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Jan. 19.—Charley Gehringer, the Detroit Tigers' mechanical man, signed a one-year contract today as nonplaying coach.

Thus the playing career of the veteran second sacker, whose 18 years in the majors were spent with the Bengals, had come to an end.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed.

"We are very glad to have Gehringer as a coach," said General Manager Jack Zeller.

An indication that Gehringer's active service with the club was drawing to a close was disclosed last week when his name was dropped from the 1942 roster.

At that time, the Detroit management left the way open for Gehringer to remain with the club by saying that he would be welcome as a coach.

Gehringer, voted the American League's most valuable player award in 1937, first showed signs of slowing down two seasons ago. Last year he needed relief more frequently.

To help fill his post, Detroit acquired Jimmy Bloodworth from Washington. In addition, the Tigers have Lambert (Dutch), 3634.

Gehringer, who will be 39 years old May 11, joined the Tigers in 1924 and became a regular the following year. A star afield, he had a lifetime batting average of better than .300.

Produce Men Urged to Cut Frills, Costs

By the Associated Press

Belleair, Fla., Jan. 19.—The Nation's fresh fruit and vegetable industry was urged to cut produce costs by eliminating fancy trimmings from packages and to seek appointment of a Federal coordinator to help do the job.

Elmer Hartner, of Denver, Colo., president of the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association, told the orginization here that "We need to keep prices within reasonable bounds, if a Government controlled system of price limits is not to impose real hardships on us all.

"We are spending altogether too much on unnecessary frills in the packaging and distribution of our commodities.

"Consumers can't eat the lace-paper liners some of us put inside our packages. Then why put them there? War or no war, every business is entitled to a profit. But in these times our first obligation is to get from the farms to the consumers fruits and vegeetables in the greatest volume, and at the least cost.

"It certainly is entirely out of order under the present national conditions to add frills and expenses with no other motive than just to outdo our competitors. I admit that we can't cure this economic unsoundness without help—outside help. Therefore I recommend to your serious consideration the appointment of a defense coordinator who would, among other duties, trim it of its unnessary trimmings.

"I do no tmean a dictator," Hartner told the convention delegates. "I doubt that our industry needs a dictator, though I believe it needs an impartial outsider to tell us that that practice is good, and that we should do more of it, and that that practice is wasteful and should be eliminated."

Public Symphony Rehearsal to Aid Mile-o'-Dimes

For the first time the National Symphony Orchestra this afternoon will admit the general public to one of its regular rehearsals. The entire proceeds from the performance—at 1:30 p. m. in the Hall of the Americas of the Pan American Union, Seventeenth and Constitution Avenue Northwest—will go to the Mile-o'-Dimes.

Works to be rehearsed this afternoon are those that will be heard tomorrow night in the National Symphony's all-subscription concert in Constitution Hall. Mme. Guiomar Novaes will play with the orchestra Hekel Tavares' "Concerto in Brazilian Forms," and the orchestra under Hans Kindler will be heard in Introduction and Dido's Lament from "Dido and Aeneas," by Purcell (arranged by Kindler), Purcell's "Suite for Strings," "Batuque," by Fernandez, and Schubert's Fourth Symphony ("The Tragic").

Machinist Breaks In Sister on Job; He's Hawaii-Bound

Chicago, Jan. 19 (AP).—The attack on Pearl Harbor didn't make Walter Caldwell, jr., forget the need for the man behind the man behind the gun.

The 21-year-old machinist brought his 19-year-old sister, Mae, to work with him and told his boss he was going to teach her to hold down his job so he could go to Pearl Harbor where the Government needs machinists.

The girl was such an apt pupil that today Caldwell reported for a physical examination for the civil service assignment.

Officials of the American Gear & Manufacturing Co., which employs Caldwell and his sister, reported that the experiment was such a success that girls might replace draftees at nearly every type of machine operation, including the largest lathes and milling units.

Scrap Rubber Drive Urged by Seiberling

Akron, Ohio, Jan. 19 (AP).—Nationwide collection of scrap rubber to alleviate the tire shortage was advocated today by President J. Penfield Seiberling, of the Seiberling Rubber Co.

"Enormous reservoir" of rubber could be obtained in this way, Seiberling told the company's twentieth annual stockholders' meeting. He recommended collection of rubber toys, hot-water bottles and other household appliances as well as old tires, asserting "no contribution would be too small."

Eccles Urges Higher Excess Profits Taxes

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 19.—Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, today advocated a further lowering of individual tax exemption limits, establishment of a withholding tax at the source of individual income and condemned plans for a general sales tax as "regressive, not progressive."

Speaking of the midwinter meeting of the New York State Bankers Association, Eccles said he believed corporation excess profits taxes should be increased. His proposal for a lowering of exemptions would apply to married and single wage earners.

He warned his hearers that sacrifices would be inevitable for all and that the war could not be won solely on the basis of the profit motive.

Must Forget Profit

"If we approach the war problem from the point of view of what we can get out of it, instead of what we can put into it, then we will lose, Eccles told the bankers.

"If individuals, business men, farmers and labor go at the problem this way, then we still have much blood and tears yet to be spilled.

"Business men, who have most to lose from defeat, must not try to pass the burden on to someone who has far less to gain and much less to lose.

"I do not believe that if the Russians had been fighting for the profit motive instead of for their homes and country they could have shown such magnificent morale."

Eccles suggested that under the spur of the war effort the national income might rise as high as 125 billion dollars in the next two or three years and suggested a total of 110 billion dollars in the fiscal year beginning next July 1. At present, he said, the figure is at the rate of about 100 billion dollars.

He said the 110 billion dollars for the coming Government financial year would permit collection of 25 to 30 billion dollars of taxes under existing schedules and still would leave 80 to 85 billion dollars of spendable income.

Needed to Finance War

Such a spendable amount normally should permit the accumulation of 15 to 20 billion dollars of savings for new investment, but, Eccles said, the latter would have to be invested now in Government bonds to finance the war.

A national income of this size, he added, would usually allow for many billions of dollars which would be invested in consumers durable goods like automobiles, washing machines, housing and similar items, the materials for which would no longer be available for nonwar use.

Eccles warned that if people, unable to spend increased income for such durable goods, allowed the expenditure to spill over into such nondurable items as food and clothing, then "the country might expect an inflation in those fields."

To prevent this, Eccles recommended lowered exemptions and higher rates for individual taxes, greater levies on excess corporation profits, and a withholding taxes on salaries and wage.

Advantages Cited

The withholding tax, Eccles said, had several advantages: It was cheap to collect; it drained off excess income as it was earned; and it prevented people from finding, long after the money was spent, that they were unable to meet their taxes.

Eccles suggested that any sum collected by the withholding tax should be allowed later as an offset against money to be raised by the income tax.

Strongly upholding the general principle of individual exemptions for absolute living expenses, Eccles nevertheless suggested that the current personal exemptions of $1500 for married couples and $750 for single persons be cut to some such figures as $1200 and $600. He also suggested it would be wise to reduce the credit of $400 now allowed for each dependent.

Eugene C. Donovan, president of the association, who is also president of the Auburn Trust Co., Auburn, N. Y., told the members that a big share of the responsibility for winning the war rested upon New York State banks because of their large percentage of the Nation's banking resources.

War-Tax Goal Defined

Richmond, Va., Jan. 19 (AP).—John L. Sullivan, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, set this goal tonight for the war-tax bill:

To make taxes so heavy that they "approach, but not reach, a point beyond which we cannot go without deadening individual initiative, dulling corporate management, encouraging extravagance and inefficiency and thus not only retarding our war effort but killing the goose that lays the golden eggs."

In an address prepared for the biennial dinner of the Virginia General Assembly, Sullivan said that the purpose of such heavy taxes was not only to pay for the war but also to save interest on borrowed money and to prevent inflation.

Communist Leader To Be Tried Feb.17

Dr. Albert Blumberg, Baltimore Communist leader, is scheduled to go on trial in the District Court February 17, on a charge of contempt of the House of Representatives.

Dr. Blumberg was indicted last April, accused of refusing to tell the Dies Committee the names of Communist Party officials. His trial was set for yesterday, but a postponement was granted by Justice James W. Morris, because Attorney Abraham Unger, New York, was unable to appear for Dr. Blumberg at this time. Also of defense counsel is Charles E. Ford.

Coffee Supplies Gain

The Commerce Department reports that stocks of green coffee in warehouses in all customs districts totaled 177,648 bags on December 31. This compared with 140,275 bags held on November 30.

Arnold Blames 'Monopolies' for Unpreparedness

Thurman Arnold, head of the Justice Department's anti-trust division, told the House Small Business Committee yesterday the defense program had disclosed "a great tendency of established business" to keep competition out of the defense field.

Price ceiling regulations, he added, have developed "many types of conspiracy" to keep up prices of necessary goods, including those of which there is an ample supply.

Generally speaking, Arnold said, in answer to a question by Chairman Wright Patman (Democrat, Tex.), "monopolies," "restraints of trade," and "the private seizure of economic power" are the bases of unpreparedness in which the democracies found themselves at the outbreak of war.

Arnold's testimony was described as "alarming" by Representative Fitzgerald (Democrat, Conn.), who said "in my opinion what we should buy is about 100 machine guns an go out and shoot about 1000 of these guys."

Arnold told of the activities of the division towards protecting the rights of all business, especially small business, which he described as "any business that doesn't have an office in Washington to represent them." To furnish that representation he said is the duty of his agency.

Elaborating on his charge that big business has shown a tendency to try to keep out competition, Arnold cited as examples a large shipbuilding company's offer to assist a newcomer in the field prepare bid forms upon promise of payment of "5 per cent of its earnings for 10 years," and of the offer of another large company controlling vital material to allow new companies to use its patent during the war if they agreed to go out of business when the war ended.

The larger companies, he commented, operate on the theory "we must dominate after the war."

His division, Arnold said, is investigating numerous business activities and practices in connection with the defense program, the subjects including scrap iron, sulphuric acid, and others which he said he would disclose in executive session later.

In reply to a question, he said there had been "a systematic effort" to retard production of synthetic rubber, but declined to expand on this at an open session.

U. S. to Offer Wheat as Livestock Feed

Approximately 100 million bushels of wheat will be offered for sale by the Commodity Credit Corporation to producers of livestock, dairy and poultry products for use as feed, the Agriculture Department announced yesterday.

Purpose of the offer, the department said, is to aid producers to comply with the department's stepped-up production program and to make additional storage space available for the 1942 crop.

The sale price per bushel of cracked wheat for feed delivered to the purchaser will be the lower of either the 1941 wheat loan value at point of delivery or the commodity credit sales for corn per bushel at point of delivery.

No sales, the department explained, will be made at a price delivered of less than 90 cents a bushel, except wheat produced and stored in counties where the 1941 wheat loan value was below 90 cents.

Sole Bidder Gets Alabama Utility's $80,000,000 Issue

New York, Jan. 19 (AP).—A large underwriting syndicate headed by First Boston Corporation and Bonbright & Co. submitted the only bid today for 80 million dollars in 3½ per cent first mortgage bonds of the Alabama Power Co., and was awarded the issue.

The bid was 100.4 per cent, indicating an interest cost to the company of 3.4784 per cent. The syndicate included 81 investment firms.

It was the largest corporate issue to be offered under the compulsory competitive bidding rule of the Securities and Exchange Commission applying to the electric light and power industry. American Telephone's larger issue last fall was offered competitively, but such action was not compulsory.

The bonds will be offered publicly Wednesday at a price of 101¾, subject to SEC approval, underwriters said.

Insurance companies and other international buyers will take large blocks of the bonds, financial circles predicted.

Alabama Power Co. will apply the proceeds of the sale to refund its outstanding mortgage debt.

Eggs Continue Sharp Decline

Chicago, Jan. 19 (AP).—Egg prices fell as much as 2½ cents in the wholesale market today as the Government announced it wanted no offers of shell eggs at any price. Weakness also prevailed in the butter market.

Poorer grade eggs showed the most decline, with checks off the full 2½ cents at 28½ cents a dozen. Fresh graded firsts, a high quality grade, sold at 32½ cents a dozen, off 1 cent.

Withdrawal of Government support from the egg market was considered the major reason for the losses, in the opinion of traders. The Government has been a consistent buyer of eggs for export abroad under terms of the Lend-Lease Act.

2 New Directors On duPont Board

Wilmington, Del., Jan. 19 (AP).—Lammot duPont Copeland and Crawford Greenewalt have been elected directors of E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co. to succeed Charles Copeland and F. B. Davis, jr., who resigned, it was announced today.

Greenewalt joined the chemical department of the company in 1922 as a research chemist and has had an important part in the development of nylon. Copeland has been with the company since 1929.

Steel Scrap Decline Laid to OPA Rules

Cleveland, Jan. 19 (AP).—Movement of steel scrap to electric aid acid open-hearth furnaces has been declining steadily since OPA's recent revision of the scrap schedule, Daily Metal Trade says today, adding:

"Furnace operators claim they are not getting an adequate supply, and dealers declare that this is because existing regulations make it unprofitable for them to handle most of the grades specified. They assert that outside of the classification for low phosphorus billet, bloom and forge crops, the differentials established for the other grades of electric furnace scrap are not sufficiently high under the broad classification for open-hearth scrap to permit the separation and preparation necessary . . ."

Warner Bros. to Get 2-Million Bank Loan

New York, Jan. 19 (AP).—Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., has arranged a two million-dollar loan at 2½ per cent interest with the New York Trust Co., Guaranty Trust Co. of New York and Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. of Chicago, it was learned today.

The loan was arranged primarily to purchase the company's 6 per cent debentures series, due 1948. Sealed tenders have been invited from debenture holders for debentures at not exceeding 96 per cent of the face value flat.

Ford Engineers Develop New Ore Recovery Process

Detroit, Jan. 19 (AP).—Henry Ford disclosed today that he is planning an intensified effort to recover iron from normally unwanted low-grade ore, utilizing an electrolytical method developed by Ford engineers.

The program, Ford said, would be of particular benefit to small communities near iron mines abandoned because of the low-grade quality of the ore.

The method, adopted by Ford after 12 years of experimentation with huge deposits of ore, is described as a system of electroplating, requiring cheap electric power for work on an industrial basis. The smelting method was ruled out as too expensive.

Nat. Power to Vote On Liquidation

New York, Jan. 19 (AP).—Common stockholders of the National Power & Light Co. will vote January 28 on a proposal to retire up to 250,000 of shares of $6 preferred stock by exchanging for it common stock of the Houston Light & Power Co.

The offer was called a step in the contemplated liquidation of National Power & Light in compliance with the Public Utility Act of 1935. National is a member of the Electric Bond & Share group of public utility holding companies.

Full-Time Executive Urged for Grain Mart

Chicago, Jan. 19 (AP).—Philip R. O'Brien, president of the Chicago Board of Trade, today advocated the employment of a salaried executive official to handle administrative affairs of the Grain Exchange.

In his annual report O'Brien, recently reelected for his second term as head of the exchange, said executive control should be vested in a man who has never been associated with the board. He should have an agricultural background, O'Brien said.

40% of Plane Plant's Workers to Be Women

Kansas City, Kans., Jan. 19 (AP).—Officials of North American Aviation, Inc., said today that 40 per cent of its workers at the bomber assembly plant it operates here probably will be women under a plan to step up production.

Employment of women for work in the plant stock rooms began today, and training of women for skilled work in the factory is to be started immediately. Wives of men now in military service will be given preference.

Steel Output Rate Holds About Steady

New York, Jan. 19 (AP).—The Nation's steel production will decline to 1,614,200 tons this week from 1,615,800 tons last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

These figures were based on reports the industry would work at 97.7 per cent of capacity, against 97.8 per cent last week.

A month ago oupu was at 93.4 per cent of capacity, equivalent to 1,543,100 tons, and a year ago 96.5 per cent, or 1,537,400 tons.

Sacrifice Now Shortens War, Bankers Told

By Thomas M. Cahill

Saying the best course for preparing for peace is to win the war, Dr. William Yandell Elliott, of Harvard University, last night told more than 250 bankers that in time of war we must make ourselves ready not only for peace but for reconstruction afterwards, by sound policies during the conflict. Dr. Elliott, now serving in the Office of Production Management, was principal speaker at the midwinter meeting of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, at Columbia Country Club.

DR. ELLIOTT

Reviewing military, psychological and financial problems of World War II, he cautioned that measures of greatest sacrifice must be made to control inflation during the war. He expressed certainty that the most drastic measures of price control and taxes met with the approval of his listeners, "men who are accustomed to study effects of an inflationary economy on the whole social and economic structure."

Sacrifices Needed

Today, every month we can shorten duration of this struggle will mean perhaps years gained in the slow process of bringing civilization back to the world, the speaker said, reminding this entails sacrifice of life and more sacrifice of what men have been accustomed to think of as liberty, that is, rights they enjoyed in an easier society.

"Today we must think of duty, the true guardian of endangered liberty," he declared, adding. "We are confronted, it must be evident, by the need for toughening our whole national moral fiber. As a people we must once more strip ourselves to pioneer elements. We must face the unknown future with the same courage as our ancestors faced a wilderness.

He asked, "Have we not, in our united strength as a nation, in our free institutions, in the really high morale of a people who have entered this war, convinced throughout the Nation that there was no escape from destiny—the greatest assurance that we will be fit to see it through and to take our place of rightful world leadership in the future?

"This war means the growing up of America through the only method that there is of reaching maturity, the stern testing of a hard experience. That it will be hard to bear there can be no doubt. A normal amount of grumbling is the essential characteristic of a free people, but underneath our impatience with our own efforts—and they are our own efforts—and sometimes with our leaders, there is the recognition of great fundamental strength now being brought fully to bear in the severest testing we have ever faced as a nation."

Capt. Wood Speaks

Another talk was given by Capt. Wood, of the British army, who served in World War I and has experienced air raids in England. He informed the assembly regarding air raid precautions taken by Britons.

The meeting also celebrated the fortieth anniversary of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, which was organized December 19, 1901. President T. Stanley Holland, of the District Bankers Association, who presided at the meeting, praised the progress made by the chapter. John M. Christie, chapter president, responded. Many of the charter members were present.

A resolution in tribute to Hunton Leith, late vice president and cashier of Security Savings & Commercial Bank, who died last November, was presented by F. G. Addison, jr., president of that bank and chairman of a special committee of the bankers' association. Mr. Leith was a past president of Washington Chapter of the institute.

President Holland announced appointment of Bruce Baird, president, National Savings & Trust Co., as general chairman for the 1942 convention of the association. A Scott Offutt, second vice president of the association and vice president of City Bank, made arrangements for the meeting. A buffet supper was served.

Federal Bank Offers $45,000,000 Issue

New York, Jan. 19 (AP).—Charles R. Dunn, as fiscal agent for the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank, offered today approximately 45 million dollars of the bank's debentures, dated and deliverable February 2 and payable October 1 and December 1 at a yield of .75 to .85 of 1 per cent.

The offering was about 11 million dollars larger than usual at this time, it was explained, that amount being new money to take care of a relatively heavy demand for loans under the increased agricultural program. Maturities on February 2 will approximate 34 million dollars.

Well known in the automotive industry, having been identified with it since 1915, Fitzpatrick is credited with initiating and developing the plan for installment financing of automobiles and organized the first such finance company in New York. Later he organized the General Motors Acceptance Corporation for General Motors, the General Exchange Insurance Corporation and a number of foreign subsidiaries of the acceptance corporation. # Mild Upturn In Stocks Led By Rail List

New York, Jan. 19.—Rails picked up an assortment of buying passengers in today's stock market and selected industrials, including steels, negotiated modest recoveries.

Many leaders and a number of "blue chips," however, continued to languish in losing territory. Trends were uneven at the start. There was a mild upturn after miday but the close was no better than moderately irregular.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up .1 of a point at 37.8. Dealings were notably slack during the greater part of the proceedings and transfers of 428,760 shares compared with 477,000 Friday. It was the smallest turnover since October 3 last.

Tax Worries Persist

Business optimism aided a number of stocks but this was offset to a considerable degree by persistent worries over the forthcoming tax program. Nothing much in the way of bullish inspiration was derived from Malayan and Philippine war bulletins. Some bidding timidity also was attributed to the growing menace of enemy submarine attacks on merchant shipping off the Atlantic seaboard.

Rails, the best performers for the past several weeks, still were buoyed by hopes of increased rates and forecasts of sharply mounting traffic as the armament program gets into full swing.

Steels seemed a bit heartened by the fact this week's estimated mill operating figure was off only .1 of a point at 97.7 per cent of capacity in the face of the serious scrap shortage confronting this industry.

Among stocks on the upside fractions to a point or so at the finish were Santa Fe, Southern Railway, Great Northern, Southern Pacific, Bethlehem Steel, Youngstown Sheet, U. S. Steel, Yellow Truck, American Telephone, Paramount, Standard Oil (N. J.), International Harvester, Caterpillar Tractor, American Smelting and United Drug. International Mineral & Chemical posted a new high for the first year.

Chemical List Weak

Shares in the heavy chemical field again were soft, apparently reflecting the possibility the excess profits tax base would be changed to the detriment of some companies. Du Pont was a loser of 2½ points at a new 1941-42 low. In the mining ranks also were Dow Chemical, Allied Chemical, Johns-Manville, Union Carbide and U. S. Gypsum. Motors, rubbers, aircrafts and utilities were narrow.

Federation Names Bennett As Secretary

E. Lester Bennett, of the Arlington Civic Federation, was elected secretary-treasurer of the Inter-Federation of Citizens Associations for the eleventh consecutive term last night at a dinner-meeting of the organization in the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest.

Other officers elected were: Dr. Victor Meyers, also of the Arlington organization, chairman; Harry N. Stull, of the District Federation of Citizens Associations, first vice chairman; Joseph T. Matre, of the Montgomery County Civic Federation, second vice chairman.

Walter F. Mulligan, of the Prince Georges County Federation of Citizens Associations, third vice chairman, and Dr. Thomas P. Martin, of the Fairfax County Civic Federation, fourth vice chairman. A unanimous ballot was cast for all officers.

A resolution was adopted by the interfederation favoring the continuance of the Congressional subcommittee investigating un-American activities, headed by Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, with an adequate appropriation for this purpose.

A letter of commendation for service was voted by members to be sent Robert E. Plymale, of Arlington, Va., member of the organization for the last 14 years and at one time heading it. The resolution expressed the appreciation of his work during this period as a "loyal public servant." Plymale is moving to the West Coast, it was said.

Judge Alfred D. Bailey, of Prince Georges County, another long-time member of the interfederation who is now recovering from a broken ankle suffered in an accident, will be sent a letter wishing him luck, it was voted.

Lincoln Park

We "cannot too strongly express our disapproval of such a deliberate blow at national defense as is involved in removing the Patent Office from the Nation's Capital," a resolution adopted last night by the Lincoln Park Citizens Association read in part.

The measure continued saying it was believed the stability of the population here would "be completely wrecked by such action." It was amended to include opposition to the removal of any permanent Government agencies established here as of January a year ago. A. D. Calvert, president, introduced the resolution.

Members of the group, who met in the Kingsman School, Fourteenth and E Streets Northeast, also adopted a resolution requesting Maj. Edward Kelly, chief of police, to enforce the traffic regulation which states automobiles shall not be driven on street car tracks when it will hinder the progress of the street cars.

A happier and more useful life for aliens who become naturalized American citizens is the goal of the new alien education program of the United States Immigration and Naturalization Service, and you'll hear this worthy aim dramatized in "Report to the Nation" over WJSV and the Columbia Network at 9:30 tonight.

Heretofore, the Naturalization Service has contented itself with instructing aliens in the rudimentary knowledge of our Governmental makeup needed to pass the simple citizenship qualification examination.

But in the future, this instruction is to be more thorough, designed to prepare aliens for active participation in their new life.

They will be instructed in such practical matters as how to apply for a new job, how to make use of their local public library and where they can go for competent medical care.

A $14,000,000 WPA appropriation is to finance this alien education program. The project was partly prompted by the discovery during the reecnt Nation-wide registration of aliens that thousands of the 5 million aliens resident in the country had lived here for many years without taking out citizenship papers. Many were afraid of becoming citizens. And still other aliens had become naturalized, but weren't active citizens because nobody had told them how to go about becoming a useful American.

1000 Urged To Volunteer For Gas Work

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Commissioner John Russell Young, coordinator of civilian defense for Metropolitan Washington, yesterday called for 1000 volunteers to man gas decontamination squads that will be organized under the direction of Capt. Walter D. Roberts.

One hundred and ten men, and an equal number of women will operate ten de-gassing stations in various parts of the District. Twenty-five field squads of 26 men each will be formed also.

Capt. Roberts, who was safety engineer at the poison gas experiment station conducted by the Army at American and Catholic Universities during the World War, announced the volunteers would have to take special training. He asked particularly for persons who have had experience with gas or training in chemistry.

$25,000 Fund Allocated

Commissoiner Young said $25,000 would be allotted to purchase protective clothing and equipment for the decontamination units. If not forthcoming from national OCD funds, it would be "found" somewhere else, he said.

At the same time, Commissioner Young announced 900 more volunteers are needed for the fire auxiliary. Physical examinations for 450 persons already registered for this division of civilian defense will be held at the Police and Fire Clinic, Thirteenth and K Streets Northwest, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights.

Defense officials are beginning to be "curious," they said, why persons are more eager to volunteer for police duty than for the fire auxiliary.

Capt. Roberts said that while it was hoped his decontamination squads would not need to be used, "nothing can be taken for granted in this war." He pointed out that gas already has been used three times in the present conflict, once by the Italians and twice by the Japanese.

Framework Set Up

A skeleton framework for the decontamination division already has been set up by experts in chemical warfare under the direction of Brig. Gen. Amos Fries. This is the first call for civilian volunteers.

At each de-gassing station, according to plans, temporary clothing will be provided for victims. Laundries of the city are working out a plan whereby they will take charge of the gassed clothing for neutralization and delivery back to the victims.

Women workers will be in charge of women patients. There will be a nurse and doctor at each station. Unless some new gas is used, Capt. Roberts said, neutralization formulas are comparatively simple "if you know them."

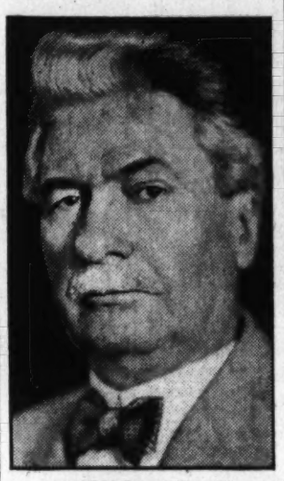
He Claimed to Hold More Offices Than Any Man of His Time



COLE L. BLEASE

Coleman Livingston Blease, stormy petrel of South Carolina politics, former Governor and Senator, died yesterday at Columbia, S. C., following an operation, Associated Press reported.

The 73-year-old perennial candidate for office was elected only last year by the General Assembly to the State unemployment commission and had begun a four-year term last July.

"Coley" Blease was elected to more offices than any other man of his time, according to his own assertions, and defeated for public office more than any other man, according to assertions of his political foes. From either point of view, it is certain that "Coley" was a candidate for some office in practically every election after attaining his majority.

Man Who Gave Many Pardons

The national limelight flashed on "Coley" Blease during his two terms as Governor of the Palmetto State, 1911-1915, when he issued nearly 3000 pardons and paroles of State prisoners. He often referred to his pardoning policy as a protest against prison conditions in the State, which he characterized as inhuman.

During this period, too, he disbanded the State National Guard as the result of a dispute with the War Department over the disposition of the militia. The order was rescinded by his successor.

Gov. Blease opposed President Wilson's policies and America's entry into the first World War. So bitter became the political opposition of the two men, that President Wilson made a direct appeal to the South Carolina voters for the defeat of Blease, then campaigning for the United States Senate. "Coley" lost that one.

Filibustered World Court

However, in 1924 he made a successful bid for the Senate with a surprising victory over Representative James F. Byrnes, present associate justice of the Supreme Court.

Senator Blease served until 1931 and maintained a vigorous isolationist, anti-Wilson position. He fought against American entry into the League of Nations and in 1926 prevented a Senate vote on a resolution of adherence to the World Court by conducting a one-man filibuster.

Frequently he disregarded party regularity, refused to be bound by Democratic caucuses. During his Senate career he professed admiration for Vice President Dawes and Senator Borah, of Idaho, both Republicans.

Born Near Newberry

"Coley" Blease was born near Newberry, S. C., the son of Henry Horatio and Mary A. Livingstone Blease. He attended Newberry College, University of South Carolina, and Georgetown University Law School. He married Miss Lillie B. Summers, of Anderson County, S. C., in 1890. She died in 1934. Three years later he took a second wife, Mrs. Carolina Floyd, of Newberry County. The couple later separated.

In private life, "Coley" Blease was a skillful criminal lawyer. From his first and successful race for the State House of Representative in 1890 he kept close contact with State politics.

Former Senator Blease was active in fraternal circles, held high offices in the Elks, Moose, Foresters, Woodmen of the World, Knights of Pythias, and Independent Order of Red Men. Among his survivors is a half brother, former Chief Justice Eugene S. Blease of the South Carolina Supreme Court.

W. D. La Mont, 52, Naval Inventor, Dies in New York

New York, Jan. 19 (AP).—Lieut. Comdr. Walter Douglas La Mont, 52, U. S. N. retired, engineer and inventor of steam generators who developed a high pressure steam boiler which he told Congressmen powered some Nazi warships, died today.

President of W. D. La Mont, Inc., and Steam Power, Inc., La Mont, in letters in 1940 to Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, and Representative Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the Senate and House Naval Committees respectively, urged installation of his boilers in United States naval vessels because, he wrote, power units in use and being installed in German naval ships were superior to United States naval ships.

The Navy Department indicated in 1940 that it believed American naval ship propulsion systems were at least equal to the German.

Walter E. Trent, Noted Researcher, Dies of Attack

Walter E. Trent, technical director for the Rocky Mountain Metals Foundation and widely known in Washington engineering research circles, died of a heart attack at his residence in the Wardman Park Hotel yesterday.

Mr. Trent had been engaged in research aimed at the more extensive use of nonferrous metals, went to New York last Thursday and returning Sunday suffered the fatal attack.

Born April 21, 1883, in Denver, Colo., Mr. Trent was graduated from Stanford University as a mining engineer and subsequently followed his profession in Utah, Idaho, Nevada and California.

Advised of the death of Mr. Trent, Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, said "the country has lost a man whose work and whose study has benefited its people. Since coming to Washington I have appreciated the contribution he was making to a proper understanding of the economic worth of mining to this Nation."

The funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Navy Expected To Turn Down Hershey Plan

The Navy is expected to reject an appeal by Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, national Selective Service director, that it stop the recruiting of volunteers and rely on the draft for its additional manpower.

Hershey urged in a letter to Secretary Knox that the continuance of recruiting by the Army, Navy and Marine Corps had brought the Nation face to face with the prospect of "disruption and dislocation of its supply of essential manpower."

He declared that the appeal for volunteers in the naval service had lured many skilled men from vital arms production jobs and that every available trained man is necessary if the war production program is to be completed on time.

Navy Favors Volunteers

There was no immediate official reaction to Hershey's request, but ranking Navy chiefs, including Knox, have repeatedly urged that the sea service be made up of volunteers as far as is possible.

A similar appeal was made to Secretary of War Stimson several weeks ago by Gen. Hershey. Stimson at first announced compliance with the request and said that Army recruiting would be stopped. Later, he rescinded the order and asserted that volunteers will continue to be accepted.

Crux of the situation as far as the Army is concerned, is that they want to accept the 18 and 19 year-old youths who are denied them under the Selective Service Law. Such men make the best soldiers, many military leaders hold.

Confusion Charged

Gen. Hershey contends that many of the volunteers accepted by the Army and Navy were already classified in Class 1-A and would be available anyway. Their acceptance as recruits results in confusion, he stated.

The Selective Service chief said that the recruiting services are building up a belief that volunteers will be favored in the military service over selectees and commended that "such practices are not conducive to good morale." He urged that the recruiting of volunteers be brought to an end gradually to avoid difficulties.

"An appropriate agency of Government should decide where the individual could best serve his Nation in total war, rather than leave the decision to the individual who is not a free agent in the matter of such," Hershey contended.
